SAMUEL STEARNS.

BY WILLIAM A. STEARNS, D. D., AMHERST, MASS.

Early Life and Education. — Rev. SAMUEL STEARNS was the fourth son, the eldest by a second marriage, of Rev. Josiah Stearns, of Epping, New Hampshire.

He descended from Mr. John Stearns, of Billerica, Massachusetts, who was an inhabitant of that town at its incorporation, in 1665. John is supposed to have been the son of Isaac Stearns, of Watertown, who came to this country in 1630, in the same vessel with Governor Winthrop. John died in Billerica March 5, 1669.

John, son of the preceding, was the first male child born in Billerica. He spent his days in his native place, and died October 6, 1728, in the seventy-fifth year of his age. "His long continuance in several offices of a civil and military kind," says Farmer, in his Genealogical Register, "affords a proof of the confidence reposed in him by his fellow-citizens."

John Stearns, third of the name and son of the preceding, lived in Billerica till 1768, when he died in the ninetieth year of his age. His wife was Esther Johnson, a lineal descendant of Captain Edward Johnson, author of "The Wonder-Working Providence of Zion's Saviour in New England."

A son of the preceding, and father of SAMUEL, was Rev. Josiah Stearns, of Epping, New Hampshire. His second wife, the mother of Samuel, was Sarah Ruggles, daughter of Rev. Samuel Ruggles, the second minister of Billerica. Rev. Samuel Ruggles was a descendant of Thomas Ruggles, who came to New England from Nasing, Essex County, England, 1637. Of Thomas and his brother John, both of whom settled in Roxbury, Massachusetts, "the apostle Eliot" says, "They were children of a godly father." Mr. Stearns's grandmother, the mother of Sarah Ruggles, was Elizabeth Williams, a niece of Rev. John Williams of Deerfield, author of "Redeemed Captive," &c., and descended from Robert Williams of Roxbury. Mr. Stearns's great-grandmother, the mother of Rev. Samuel Ruggles, was Martha Woodbridge, daughter of Rev. John Woodbridge, minister of Andover and Newbury, and granddaughter of the first Governor Dudley.

SAMUEL STEARNS, the subject of this notice, was born at Epping, New Hampshire, April 8, 1770. He was the eighth of twelve children,—the eldest son and second child of a second marriage,—his father having three sons and three daughters by each wife. His advantages for early schooling were small. The only school within his reach was the town school, which was rarely kept more than six or eight weeks in the year. This was taught by an Irishman, whose knowledge of English was very imperfect. But as he was nearly a pauper, and was in danger of "coming on the town," the inhabitants thought best to help him to a living by giving him the instruction of the young. The studies pursued were reading, spelling, writing, and arithmetic. The books used were the Psalter and Testament and Dilworth's Spelling-book. Master M'Loney—for that was the teacher's name—taught arithmetic by "setting the sums" for the scholars. In spelling, he would give out a word, and then, as he said, "bate it into them," sometimes going round the whole class, giving a blow for a letter. This, it is hoped, is hardly a fair specimen of the schools of New Hampshire in those days. But the Revolutionary war had broken out, and poverty and confusion reigned.

This want of advantages was partially compensated by the teachings of the fireside; for though the father was not accustomed to instruct his children formally, except in the Bible and catechism, he was continually, when with them, imparting some verbal instruction, religious, moral, or literary, "giving line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little." In this way, also, he made his sons familiar with the causes and prospects of the war, and inspired the elder ones with courage to take the field.

The times were so hard that Samuel, as soon as he was old enough, was not only required to labor daily on his father's little farm, but was often taken from school for the purpose. However, he was brought up amidst exciting scenes,—his religious and moral opportunities were also great, and at an early age, "thoughts stirred within him."

The circumstances which led to his obtaining a classical education are briefly narrated in a sermon which he preached about eighteen months before his death. It was delivered the first Sabbath after he had been constituted the minister of the new Trinitarian Society,—a society which had just connected itself with the church in Bedford,—recently exiled from the old parish and its meeting-house.

His text was the words of Samuel, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." His Installation had taken place June 5, 1833. In this discourse he says:—

"When the speaker was between seventeen and eighteen years of age, his mind became impressed with a desire to devote himself to God, in the work of the Christian ministry. But he saw no way in which he might expect even to obtain the necessary qualifications,—a classical education. He was one of a numerous family of children. His parents, as is usually the case with those connected with the ministry, were in a great degree destitute of worldly property and absolutely unable to meet the expense of such an education. And, besides, the labors of his father, who had then spent more than thirty years in the ministry of Christ, were fast coming to an end. A few months more and an inveterate disease, which was then wasting his strength, would terminate both his life and ministry together. Thus, as to ever obtaining the object of his desire all was impenetrably dark and discouraging, and no gleam of light was discoverable to inspire even a distant hope. In this dark and depressing state of things some months had passed away,—his circumstances occasionally drawing from his eye a solitary tear as he pursued alone his daily labors in the field, and at the same time prompting a humble prayer that God would provide a way for the attainment of his desire,—when an incident occurred which led, contrary to all previous thought and in a way which seemed almost miraculous, to a gleam of light and to the joy of hope. The father, as he is approaching the grave, is called for the last time to preach abroad in another town; an aged disciple of Christ, a man of wealth and patron of learning, hears,—is pleased with the discourse, requests a copy; the son is sent to carry it, with a desire burning in his heart, but known to no one but his Maker, that his life may be spent in the service of Christ in the Christian ministry; and, without the least intimation of all this, a proposal soon follows from this aged Christian to defray himself the necessary expenses of an important part of the preparatory studies. And, my friends, who does not see in all this the interposing, controlling hand of Heaven? And how natural is it that here the preacher should pause, and in view not only of this impressive event, but of all that has followed connected with it, should erect his grateful Ebenezer, and bless the Lord who hitherto hath heiped him."

The aged patron of learning here alluded to was the Hon. John Phillips, founder of Exeter Academy, then usually called Dr. Phillips from his title of LL. D. Dr. Phillips gave the young man, when he called with the manuscript, a volume of Doddridge's Life, and, expressing a wish that he would read it, and that it might be a blessing to him, asked whether he had any desire for a public education? why his father had not put him in the way to obtain one? Was it because he did not feel able? whether he (Samuel) desired to devote his life to the ministry? &c. A few days after, Dr. Phillips sent a messenger to Mr. Stearns the elder, proposing to defray the expenses of his son's preparatory education, if he might be sent to college. This arrangement would have been at once gratefully accepted by Samuel and his parents, but the long and painful sickness of the father rendered the filial services of the son indispensable at home. The generous proposal, therefore, could not be accepted.

At the decease of his parent, Samuel, then in his nineteenth year, found himself intrusted by will with the settlement of his father's estate, with the care of his mother, and an oversight of the younger children of the family.

- Some time after the death of Mr. Stearns the elder Dr. Phillips's proposal was renewed. It was now a serious question, both with mother and son, whether, under all the circumstances, so great an undertaking should be attempted. But the mother said, "It is the call of God, and he will help us through"; and as the desire of the son for an education was very strong, obstacles were surmounted, and the long-wished-for course of life entered upon. Mr. Stearns joined Exeter Academy in 1789, and continued there till fitted for college.

Concerning his life at Exeter, Mr. Abbot, then principal of the Academy, in answer to some questions addressed to him in 1847, writes:—

" You must not expect very particular or circumstantial notices of a pupil from a man of eighty-five years of age, under whose inspection more than two thousand pupils have passed. With regard to the object of your inquiry, Rev. Samuel Stearns, I have the pleasure to recollect distinctly more circumstances of his personal appearance, character, and scholarship than of most others of that early date. On the catalogue of Dr. Phillips's beneficiaries I find standing first the name Samuel Stearns, and I well remember the particular interest Dr. Phillips took in him as the son of his friend and favorite preacher, the Rev. Mr. Stearns of Epping. ' His character as a scholar was very good, standing among the first.' Whether a communicant of any church, or what his views and feelings respecting his future profession were, was not distinctly known to me at the time. It was, however, then understood by students and instructors, that all those particularly patronized by Dr. Phillips were destined for the sacred ministry."

He entered Dartmouth College in 1790. Of his standing there Mr. Abbot adds:—

" My impressions then were, and ever since have been, that he uniformly sustained the character for scholarship, piety, and amiable, pleasant manners and habits which distinguished him while a member of Phillips Exeter Academy; and, permit me to add, an impression which has remained with me through a long life."

His religious feelings were greatly deepened at an early period of his connection with college. An aged sister, now deceased, used to say that she remembered his altered manner, on returning home in vacation,—his having a private interview with his mother, in which he disclosed to her his feelings, and her coming out of the room where they had been together in tears,—a thing very unusual with her,—and his conducting family prayers for the first time. He did not, however, make a public profession of his faith in Christ while in college, nor till October 19, 1794, at which time he joined the church in Epping.

While in Dartmouth he was quite a proficient in singing, of which he was always exceedingly fond, and led the college choir.

About the middle of his collegiate course he transferred his connection from Dartmouth to Harvard. This he did partly in the hope of gaining superior advantages, and partly out of regard to personal and domestic convenience. A younger brother, who died an octogenarian some years ago, once expressed to the writer his belief that "Dr. Phillips was consulted about this movement, as he certainly was originally about the college he should enter"; also, that the Doctor remarked, rather playfully, "If I send you to Hanover, I suppose they will make a Hopkinsian of you, and if to Cambridge, an Arminian,"—the Scylla and Charybdis of Theology which the veteran Calvinist wished to avoid. "That remark," said the brother, "might have had some influence in his determining to divide his course between the two colleges." "I think, however," he adds, "that in after years he disapproved of such removals."

Mr. Stearns entered Harvard College during the administration of President Willard, at a period of remarkable insubordination among the students. This spirit continued through most of his course. The destruction of property was great, and the riotous conduct of some became intolerably annoying as well as expensive to the more sedate and diligent. They finally determined to bear it no longer. Quite a large number of them signed their names to a declaration that they would expose the first student who should be detected by them in any repetition of the mischief. That they might be entirely aboveboard and honorable, at their request their declaration and names appended were read before the college at prayers. The rioters designated them as "the Judas Club." Mr. Stearns was one of the number. The excitement was great, and in some instances lives were in danger. Late one evening Mr. Stearns was informed that there was a gang of drunken sailors "at the tavern," headed by a member of college, a dissipated, profane, hardened person, preparing to attack his room in the night. His friends advised him to leave the room. But this he thought would imply a want of spirit, of which he was not conscious. Finding his room-mate of the same mind with him, they barricaded their door and armed themselves with clubs, and awaited the result. About midnight the rioters came on, swearing fearfully as they ascended the stairs. They dashed several times against the door, with great fury; but it had been well secured. The two students stood within, each, club in hand, determined to prostrate the first who should enter. Fortunately, the rioters, being a little too highly "qualified" for discretion, fell into a contest among themselves, and with awful oaths retired, fighting each other. The leader was soon after expelled from college.

Mr. Stearns had all those feelings with regard to giving unnecessary information against a fellow-student which characterize a high-minded scholar. But he thought that there were limits to forbearance. And while he would do nothing underhand, and was characteristically magnanimous in his dealings with men, he fully agreed with his fellow-students who signed the declaration, that there were bounds beyond which silence was no longer a virtue. They could neither endure the expense of this long-continued and wanton waste of property,—which of course was assessed on all the students,—nor afford to lose, by the lawlessness of a few, the advantages for the enjoyment of which they had entered college.

These are delicate questions of honor which press themselves on a student; and a high-minded man will often prefer great personal discomfort, and even loss of standing as a scholar, to the suspicion of acting meanly. But there can be no question, on any code of honor, that when abuses become intolerable, an individual, or an association of students, may say to their fellows, "Hitherto shall ye go, but no further." Mr. Stearns was a member of the religious fraternity in Harvard, and fragments of an interesting address delivered to that body, on parting with them, are still in existence. He was also elected a member of the Φ. B. K., and graduated, in the Class of 1794, with a highly honorable appointment at Commencement.

On leaving college he went to Andover, and, jointly with his old friend and classmate at Exeter, Mark Newman, Esq., took charge of Phillips Academy. At the same time he commenced the reading of theology with Rev. Jonathan French, minister of that place. Mr. French was an intimate friend of the Phillipses, and Lieutenant-Governor Samuel Phillips, who founded Andover Academy, was his parishioner; and by securing the right in the charter of that Academy to educate students for the ministry, and by establishing endowments for the same, laid the foundation of Andover Theological Seminary. Mr. French, in connection with these original endowments, had been appointed Professor of Theology by the trustees. In that capacity, and as an able minister of Christ, he was in the habit of educating young men for the duties of the sacred profession.

Ministerial Life and Labors.—In the spring of 1796 Mr. Stearns received a unanimous call from the church and parish in Bedford, Massachusetts, to take the oversight of them in the ministry. Many of that people had known him from his childhood. The old family mansion of his ancestors, which he occasionally visited, stood just beyond the limits of Bedford, on the confines of Billerica, and his father had often preached in the former town as well as in the latter.

Bedford was originally set off from Billerica and Concord. It was incorporated by the General Court of Massachusetts on the 23d of September, 1729, on condition that the inhabitants of the town should build a meeting-house and settle a minister without unnecessary delay. It was chiefly a farming town. The inhabitants were a solid, religious, and highly respectable people. They had sought the act of incorporation chiefly from religious considerations. In their petition to the selectmen of Concord, to which town a part of their territory had belonged, they say:—

“ If our seeking to draw off proceed from any disaffection to our present reverend pastor, or the Christian society with whom we have taken such sweet counsel together, then hear us not this day. But we greatly desire, if God please, to be eased of our burdens on the Sabbath,—the travel and fatigue thereof,—that the Word of God may be nigh to us, near to our houses and in our hearts, that we and our little ones may serve the Lord. We hope that God, who stirred up Cyrus to set forward temple work, will stir you up to grant the prayer of our petition.”

They had enjoyed the ministry of Messrs. Bows, Sherman, and Penniman, all sound in the faith, though the latter had peculiarities not always to edification. They were united and earnest in calling Mr. Stearns to the ministry among them. But while he respected the people, and felt a deep interest in their religious welfare, he was not inclined, at first, to take permanently the spiritual charge of them. A circumstance, however, which he always looked upon as providential, finally led him to an affirmative answer. In the sermon, an extract from which has been already quoted, he says:—

“ When, after long and deliberate consideration, he had come to the conclusion that he must negative the call which he had received from this church and people,—when he had actually prepared a negative answer, sealed it up and directed it to a distant minister with whom he expected the next Sabbath to exchange that he might read it,—when also his horse was at the door and the time had come for him to set out on a journey, an unexpected occurrence occasioned a delay of something like half an hour,—during which time several of the parish, who had by some means gotten an intimation of what was doing, came in and requested that the answer might not be read till another Sabbath. Accordingly, as they were urgent, merely to gratify them and not expecting that the delay would alter anything, their request was consented to. And this gave a turn to the whole matter. A new answer was prepared and given in the affirmative; and here the speaker, by the help of God, has continued for more than thirty-seven years until this day."

He was ordained April 27, 1796. On the council, besides neighboring ministers, was President Willard and Rev. Professor Tappan of Cambridge, and Mr. French of Andover. The council met, and after services dined in the western part of the town, about a mile and a half from the meeting-house, at the house of Colonel Timothy Jones. An ordination in those days was a great occasion. People thronged in from the neighborhood, many to attend the religious services, many to enjoy a holiday. The common around the meeting-house, according to the custom of the times, was covered with booths. Mr. French preached the sermon from Isaiah xlix. 5: "Though Israel be not gathered, yet shall I be glorious in the eyes of the Lord, and my God shall be my strength,"—words on which the then youthful pastor elect had occasion to reflect, as applied to a portion of his parish, in his old age.

In addressing the candidate at the close of this discourse, Mr. French says: "You enter the work of the ministry with the fairest prospects that a complete unanimity and the warmest affections of a people can promise."

He also says:—

"The present occasion may naturally call to remembrance your late reverend deceased father, whose fame was in all the churches. Born in the vicinity, though settled at a distance from it, the manner of his life and his preaching were well known, and very dear to this people. The remembrance of him is doubtless a concurring circumstance in heightening their affection for you. Had he lived to see this day, what emotions of pleasure would have been excited in every breast."

Thus, in little more than a year and a half after graduating,—time occupied not only in reading theology, preparing sermons, and preaching as a candidate, but in teaching the Academy,—Mr. Stearns found himself settled over a parish as its minister for life. This haste was in some respects contrary to his inclinations, and made the labors of his study afterwards more arduous. But several circumstances besides the custom of hasty theological preparations urged him on, among which was the necessity which he felt of procuring a permanent home for his aged mother and two young sisters, of whom he had had the care during the whole course of his preparatory education, and the urgency of the people in Bedford, of whom it was playfully remarked by some in the neighboring towns, that "the Bedford people called their minister before he left college, and settled him before he began to preach."

Soon after his settlement, Mr. Stearns bought the large mansion-house which he afterwards occupied through life, and which had then been recently built, and a farm of about twenty acres lying around it, and took his mother and sisters to his own home.

On the 9th of May, 1797, he was married to Miss Abigail French, the eldest daughter of his father's friend and his own theological instructor, Rev. Jonathan French. A lady of rare fortitude, energy, intelligence and practical wisdom as well as piety, she gave to her husband no common support as a minister, and after his death lived to a good old age, enjoying the love and admiration of a numerous posterity and extensive circle of friends.

It will not be necessary nor expedient to conduct this biographical notice in chronological order throughout. The annals of a "country minister," unless illustrated by sketches of scenes and events from his own pen, must of course be repetitious. Each year brings along with it its regular routine of obligations and performances, hardly varied, perhaps, except by peculiarities in the afflictions of families, and the little excitements and calms which from time to time pass over a village. Some general view of Mr. Stearns's ministerial life, therefore, is all that will be attempted till we approximate its close.

He was a close student, spending most of his time in his study. Faithful in his preparations for the pulpit, he usually wrote out his two sermons a week, oftener than otherwise both on the same text. The same subject was sometimes protracted through a succession of weeks, the series of discourses forming a treatise. His sermons generally were well considered and wrought with care, and harmoniously completed. They were full of evangelical instruction, and were characterized by appropriate and glowing application. There was apparently no effort to produce "great sermons," not even for the most part on extraordinary occasions, but to present some gospel truth in a clear, scriptural, earnest manner. His main effort, in the pulpit, was to quicken and "build up" the people of God, to rouse impenitent sinners and bring them to Christ. With what simplicity and sincerity, with what fervid and untiring zeal, with what glowing of spiritual emotion, this was performed every survivor who heard him often must remember. In the natural course of ministerial duty he published, by request, the following sermons:—

At the ordination of Rev. Samuel Gile, in Milton, Massachusetts, February 18, 1807, from Rev. ii. 10: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

At the ordination of Rev. Thomas Shelton, November 2, 1808, in Foxborough, Massachusetts, from 2 Corinthians v. 20: "Now then we are ambassadors for Christ; as though God did beseech you by us, we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God."

At the ordination of Rev. Ebenezer P. Sperry, in Dunstable, New Hampshire, November 3, 1813, from 1 Timothy iv. 16: "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee."

A sermon delivered in Bedford, July 1, 1810, "the Sabbath after the death of Mr. David Bacon, who was shot through the body, June 25th, by Mr. William Merriman," from Exodus xx. 13: "Thou shalt not kill."

"A Discourse delivered at Bedford, July 8, 1817, at the Dedication of the Meeting-house, from Genesis xxviii. 17: 'This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.'"

"A Sermon preached in Boston before the Massachusetts Society for promoting Christian Knowledge, May 31, 1820," from James i. 18: "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth."

Also a sermon delivered at the funeral of Rev. Eliab Stone of Reading,—a sermon which he had been requested years before to prepare for that occasion.

Few ministers were more faithful in visiting the sick. Not only was this done in the customary routine of Monday morning labors, in behalf of those who had presented "notes" for prayers on the previous Sabbath, but from a sense of duty and spontaneous impulse. In critical cases, the physician watched with no more care over the physical condition, than he did for the health of the soul. He was accustomed to jot down, in his Almanac, in the fewest possible words, a minute of the labors of each passing day. For instance: "January 10th, 1801, A. M. In my study, cloudy and cold. P. M., visited N. G., sick, died soon after I left," &c. Sometimes there is a record of visiting the same person twice and even three times in the day, watching with the greatest solicitude and faithfulness to the close. He considered this sort of pastoral visitation as among the most important of his duties. Though he had little confidence in mere death-bed repentances, and often declared this fact in public, lest the delaying should presume on their last hours, he felt that, both as a faithful pastor and a friend to his flock, he ought to be looked to as a ministering angel in the chambers of the sick and dying. His own view of the case is thus presented, in the sermon preached the first Sabbath after his connection with the reorganized Society, June 9, 1833.

"The chambers of sickness and the bed of death, he [their pastor] has made the places of his frequent resort; nor has he viewed this service to be a kind of drudgery, — a secondary business merely, which is to be performed only when no other concern is pressing. No ; he has considered it duty of high importance, and not to be neglected or delayed till some more convenient time, without the most urgent necessity. Perhaps the present might be the only opportunity he would have to minister to the spiritual wants of the sick members of his charge, — to comfort and illumine the path of the dying Christian, — to strengthen his faith, and point him upward to those blessed mansions which the Saviour hath provided ; or to awaken the sleeping conscience of the departing sinner, urge his immediate submission to God, and trust in the atonement of the Almighty Redeemer, whose blood cleanseth from all sin. True, all this has often been done in the time of health, and the unhappy man has as often turned away with proud contempt from the message of love. But the faithful minister cannot give him up as forever lost, without at least one more powerful effort to save his undying soul. Suspending, therefore, every other employment, he hastens to the sick-chamber, and there by faithful counsels and admonitions, fervent and agonizing prayers, tenderness, and concern, he manifests to the unhappy sufferer how much he feels for the salvation of his soul. Nor will he give over his efforts to bring him to Christ, that he may be washed from his sins in atoning blood, till death forever closes the scene. And, judging from some observation and many years' experience on this point, it would certainly seem that almost any branch of ministerial duty had better be neglected or performed with cold formality than this."

In revivals of religion, several of which were enjoyed in the church during his ministry, as also in guiding inquirers at other times, few men were ever more faithful, more solicitous, more prayerful, more cautious. Not fond of new measures, he rejected no means of grace which seemed scriptural and promised good results. Believing that a change of heart was necessary for admission to the kingdom of God, and a credible evidence of it for admission to the Church, he looked for evidences of this change in all candidates for church-membership, but was careful to exclude no one, however weak in the faith, who, in the judgment of enlightened charity, might be considered hopefully a child of God.

He was among the first to sustain "the monthly concert of prayer" and evening prayer-meetings, which in his early ministry were not common in the community.

A method of spiritual benefit to his people which he sometimes adopted, was addressing pastoral letters to individuals. An extract from one only will be here inserted. It has reference to a gentleman somewhat advanced in life, who had embraced erroneous opinions, had begun to neglect public worship, and was supposed to be falling into unsafe habits. The letter was kindly received, and its influence is remembered to have been very great at least for a time. After stating this man's case very earnestly and tenderly and the pastor's deep interest in it, the letter goes on : —

"And now, my dear and respected friend, I have one thing to propose to you. It is the result of much thought and prayerful inquiry, and I cannot but hope it will meet your sincere and hearty approbation. It is this : that you should take up the Bible, and, beginning with the New Testament, read it, as you have time, carefully and prayerfully through in course, that you may learn what is the very truth of God, as therein revealed, and with a particular application to your own case. You will say you have already read your Bible again and again. I do not doubt that you have, but I want you to read it in a different manner from what probably you ever have done before. 'If any man,' says Christ, 'will do his,' i. e. the Father's, 'will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God.' Here seems to me to be an express promise that those who read with mind open to conviction and a disposition to do whatever they shall find to be the will of God, however self-denying and contrary to their former opinions, shall be made acquainted with the truth.

"Now, sir, I want you to read the New Testament through, in course, with such a mind divested of all former prejudices, and earnestly desirous to know the very truth of God. As no man can proceed safely without the help of the Spirit of God, it is my particular desire, that, before you begin to read, from time to time you would retire by yourself, spread open your Bible before the Lord, and earnestly pray to him that he would enlighten your mind by his Holy Spirit, and enable you to discover and receive into your heart the very truth as it is in Jesus. In this way I wish you to proceed chapter by chapter, till you have gone through the whole. This request I am confident, dear sir, you will receive kindly, as the dictate of my sincere regard for your present comfort and future and eternal good; and I do earnestly hope you will not deny me, as it has not been made without much consideration and prayer to God, for his divine direction. I cannot but hope I have been led to make it by his Spirit, whose guidance I have so often sought, and that it is a hopeful prelude to the special mercy of God whereby he is about to bring you home to himself, and to fit you for new and vastly important usefulness in his service. O, would to God it may prove so! To this end I now promise you, dear sir, that you shall have an earnest remembrance in my daily retirements and supplications at the throne of grace. And I do earnestly beg of you, while reading thus the New Testament as above, besides constant prayer for the Divine guidance, to set apart one hour in each week for special prayer to God for his blessing on your meditations, that they may prove effectual through grace unto your eternal salvation. In this special season for prayer I propose, by the help of God, to engage also with a particular reference to your case, and would now propose as a suitable time for this every Saturday evening between the hours of eight and nine o'clock. I will only add my earnest and confident hope that you will comply with the proposals; but be this as it may, I beg you to call to mind on every Saturday evening at the hour proposed, that your pastor is lying at the throne of grace earnestly supplicating the Father of mercies that you may become a new creature in Christ Jesus, and be prepared to join the song of the redeemed hereafter, for ever and ever. With sentiments of sincere regard, and most fervent prayers for your temporal and eternal good, I subscribe your friend and servant in the faith of Christ,

“SAMUEL STEARNS.”

He had great trials, especially in the early part of his ministry, in managing some cases of church discipline. One in particular was a source of the deepest anxiety to him for many years; and as it afterwards became notorious, finally involving an act of murder, it cannot properly be passed over.

The person in question was a prominent citizen and deacon of the church, a man of strong and imperious will, of considerable intelligence and great influence, the leader of the Democratic party in town at that time essentially Democratic, in theology holding to a doctrine of predestination approaching Antinomianism. This man, under the influence of passion when his measures were not adopted, or of incipient insanity not then suspected, allowed himself to indulge in such freedoms and improprieties of speech, and was guilty of such inconsistencies of conduct as rendered him amenable, in the way of discipline, to the church, whose authority he despised, and from whose communion he was finally suspended. As he became afterward more violent and unsafe, a guardian was placed over him by the selectmen of the town, which guardian Mr. M. deliberately shot.

The plea of insanity was set up for him at his trial, and on this ground he was partially acquitted. In the management of this case, which was before the church for several years, previous to their final action upon it, and while the subject of it was looked upon as entirely responsible for his conduct, the greatest wisdom, forbearance, firmness, and gentleness was required, or the existing ministry would have been broken up and the church have received injuries from which it could not easily have recovered.

In the sermon of June 9, 1833, before quoted, Mr. Stearns says:—

“In conducting the discipline of the church some cases have occurred of the most embarrassing and painful nature. In these, and all other cases of discipline, it has been the prayerful endeavor of the pastor to adhere most sacredly to the rule (Matt. xviii.) which Christ has left his Church for the guidance of her conduct in this respect; and so successful have these endeavors been as to secure a wonderful degree of harmony and union among the brethren, even in the most trying and perplexing cases that have ever come before them."

He labored with great diligence and in various ways for the instruction of the young. At an early period of his ministry, twice a year he held a public catechising. The children of the parish assembled on an appointed afternoon. All the questions in the Assembly's Catechism were asked and answered by them. Then it was said, "If any of the children have committed the whole catechism to memory, and are prepared to recite it, they may now come forward into the broad aisle." Usually one or two, sometimes six or seven, presented themselves. The questions were then asked them in order, and from beginning to end. Great accuracy and promptness were required. If any failed they were comforted and encouraged to try again, at the next catechising. Those who succeeded were conducted to what was called "the spectators' pew," and had the privilege ever afterwards, on these occasions, of hearing without reciting. Next followed some small questions, to small children, on the simplest principles of the Gospel. Then a hymn, given out beforehand, was recited. In this exercise "the spectators" took a part. After the hymn, impressive anecdotes and exhortations, general advice, and earnest addresses on personal religion followed. The whole was closed with prayer. Although "catechising" was a long afternoon, the children not only attended generally, but seemed deeply interested. Reciting the catechism through was a great matter.

At one period of his ministry he was accustomed to have what he called a catechetical exercise with the young people. They met once a fortnight, in the evening. A question was given out on some great principle of Christian doctrine or duty, and each scholar was expected to answer it with Scripture passages in writing, at the same time committing as many of them to memory as possible. The exercise was followed with explanations, exhortations, &c. Then all the manuscripts were taken home by the pastor, carefully examined and corrected, and given back to the scholars, with sundry practical and encouraging remarks. Nearly all the youth in the town attended the catechetical meeting.

About 1818 he established a Sabbath school. It was one of the earliest in the Commonwealth, and, in our opinion, one of the best conducted. All the children and young people were classed according to age and abilities. There were different text-books for different classes. Among others, Cumming's Questions and Mason's Manual on Self-Knowledge, which last was used for the highest class. But the principal book was the Bible. It was committed to memory. Large portions of the word of God were thus laid up in many a heart.

Everything connected with the school was arranged by the pastor, though not himself usually present during the exercises. The most perfect order prevailed. This was beautifully apparent in the moving of the children from the school-house to the meeting-house. The school-house stood near the road, on the east end of the common. The meeting-house stood some rods back, on the south side of the common. The classes were all formed to march in procession, the girls' classes first, then the boys', each class with its teacher at its head, the superintendent leading the way. It was so arranged, that when the pastor and his family came upon the common from the west, the school would be entering it from their school-house on the east. They would meet, about the centre of the common, and go into the meeting-house together, the pastor first, and the children following. That beautiful scene of meeting on the common and marching in procession into the church stands before the writer's mind at this moment as a sort of divine reality, and the old church-bell, tolling all the while, rings still in his heart. How easy for the shepherd to realize, under these circumstances, that the lambs of the parish were an important part of his flock, and to remember them most tenderly in the prayers of God's house.

There were also, at a later period, sometimes meetings in the week for baptized children, in which they were instructed into the nature of their baptism and the duties corresponding to it.

This interest in the children was equally apparent in connection with the day schools. At an early period of his ministry he began to look after them, and never ceased to consider them as most important agencies in the accomplishment of his parochial work. For nearly thirty successive years he was chosen by the town as chairman of the school committee, and the examining of teachers was nearly all done by him. The examinations of the schools, too, were nearly all attended and directed by him, in connection with the committee. At the close he always addressed the children, commanding excellencies, pointing out defects, showing the older scholars how they might carry on a continued course of improvement during the long vacations, which, sad to relate, were protracted through the larger portion of the year, inculcating correct manners and that fear of the Lord which is the beginning of wisdom, and stimulating all the youths to good endeavors.

At the time of his settlement the Bedford schools were in a low condition. The Town Records show what efforts were made from time to time to improve them. In 1818 a very large special committee was appointed in reference to them, of which committee Mr. Stearns, as usual, was chairman. This report, which was adopted by the town, embodies most of those modern improvements which are generally supposed to belong to a later day, together with some good things which the present generation have rejected; and it shows the interest which some of our Congregational ministers were accustomed to take in the schools in his day.

Nor were his efforts to promote general order and improvement limited to the young. When he came to Bedford he found some things in the mode of conducting funerals very disagreeable to him, and demoralizing. Among others, it was customary in Bedford, as it was in many other towns, for the friends of the deceased to provide large supplies of ardent spirits for the mourners and the assembled crowd. Mixed liquors were circulated by pailfuls, and many showed their respect for the dead by free indulgence. He procured an article to be inserted in the town warrant, for the March meeting in 1804, "To see if the town will agree on and recommend to the inhabitants a more regular mode of attending the solemn occasions of Funerals." The subject was taken up and referred to a committee of which he was chairman; as the result of their efforts, the miserable practice of drinking at funerals was abandoned, an orderly arrangement was adopted, and these services were conducted in the town during the rest of his ministry with a quietness, system, and solemnity which was congenial to mourners, and attracted the admiration of all cultivated minds.

There was an irregularity connected with public worship which he entirely corrected. The people were in the habit of coming late, and the services were rarely commenced till twenty minutes or half an hour after the time. Mr. Stearns brought this matter before the town, and procured an understanding that the hour assigned for public worship should be the exact time for commencing it. By undeviating punctuality himself, he so far changed the habits of the people that in after years everybody was almost uniformly in his place at the moment required. His custom was to set his clock on Saturday, by a meridian fixed in his front door-way. As services were to commence at half past ten, he would come down from his study to the parlor, where the family were expected to be assembled, and take his seat in silence about ten minutes before the time. At five minutes before the time all would start together for the meeting-house, the father and pastor with deliberate and measured step leading the way. He arrived at the meeting-house in about three minutes, and exactly at the hour commenced the services.

Notwithstanding this love of order, as a general principle, in all affairs of the town and parish he was courteous, and as yielding as the circumstances would allow. In the discourse before quoted he says:—

"In matters of a secular and parochial nature,—such, for instance, as visiting and conducting the affairs of the schools,—it has been the constant desire of the speaker to secure to the youth the greatest amount of good. And, the more effectually to obtain this object, he has ever acted on the maxim, In all little matters be yielding and accommodating, but in matters of great importance, especially those which involve plain duty to God, there to be ever firm and undeviating."

Through his whole ministry he was deeply interested in the welfare of his country. Like many other Congregational ministers of that day, while he would not annoy his parishioners by preaching on questions which were merely political, he thought it his duty to keep them informed in all important emergencies relating to public affairs. Not to "show his colors" on subjects which involved the welfare of the nation and the Church he would have considered an unworthy betrayal of the cause of morals and religion intrusted to him. On one occasion, in the early part of his ministry, when the presence of French domination and a torrent of French influence were threatening to involve the country in war, the friends of order and religion thought it their duty to sustain the government by mounting what was called the white cockade. Mr. Stearns, who had worn the badge during the week, did not displace it on the Sabbath. Some parishioners, Deacon Merriam at the head, were offended, and one or two, on plea of conscience, refused to enter the meetinghouse. A great excitement followed during the ensuing week. Mr. Stearns was unwilling to offend his people, but thought that he could not comply with the wishes of some of them without an appearance of cowardice and disloyalty. After service, next Sabbath, he accordingly read to them the exposition which follows.

"BRETHREN AND FRIENDS: Whereas some uneasiness and dissatisfaction has been expressed among us, in the course of the week past, in consequence of my having adopted and worn the constituted badge of attachment to the government and religion of my country, I feel it a duty incumbent upon me at this early period thus publicly to declare to you my views, motives, and feelings in the case.

"I need not tell you, that, in the course of Divine providence, distressing difficulties have arisen between this and some of the nations of Europe, which for a considerable time past have threatened us with all the distresses and horrors of war. To settle these difficulties, and to restore friendship and good understanding between the disaffected parties upon the strictest principles of justice and condescension, we are sensible every possible method has been taken on our part, without sacrificing our national liberty and independence. These attempts have been rejected without granting us so much as a hearing, and we are told in the most emphatic terms that nothing short of some millions of dollars shall save us from the vengeance of that Republic; and not only, my brethren, is our precious liberty and independence threatened with invasion, and, I conceive, annihilation, but what is, if possible, infinitely more dreadful, the religion of our dear Redeemer. For, should we be left, in Providence, to fall into the hands of a nation which has already overthrown and entirely abolished, not only popery, but even all religions of every denomination among themselves,—a nation which has levelled its houses of public worship with the ground, slain and hewn in pieces its priests and ministers by hundreds, and even cut up Christianity by the roots, and among whose inhabitants nothing but dreadful infidelity and atheism prevail; I say, should we fall into the hands of such a people, what can we expect but to share a similar fate? These suggestions, my brethren, I may venture to assert, from the best authority, are no fiction, but a dreadful reality. And in this critical juncture of our affairs we are called upon, as we love our country and our religion, to stand forth in its defence by manifesting our fixed determination to support its wise and salutary administration of government, with which our nation must rise or fall. With a view to manifest the determination to one another, to our enemies and to the world; and so, under Providence, to deter them, if possible, by our firmness and union, from further distressing us, the badge which, it seems, has given offence to some of you, has been adopted and worn by some of the first characters from the one end of the nation to the other. It is not, I may venture to assure you, as perhaps has been represented, a badge or token of fondness or attachment to the cause of Great Britain, or of a desire for war; but is designed purely to show, in the present critical juncture of our affairs, our attachment to our own country and those privileges, both civil and religious, with which kind Heaven has been pleased to bless us. With this view, my brethren, let me in this public manner most solemnly declare to you it was that I wore the badge at which some, it seems, have taken offence. Nor do I recollect that it ever once occurred to my mind that it might so offend or hurt the conscience of any of my brethren as to drive them from the house of God, or even interrupt their worship, till informed that this had been the case in the course of the past week. Being greatly surprised, and even wounded in my feelings, at such hasty and unexpected conduct, I have since, as well as before appearing with the badge in public, examined the nature and propriety of the thing with the greatest seriousness and attention of which I am capable; and, after all, must rest satisfied that, not only my design, but the thing itself, is laudable and decent. Nor can I forbear, without neglect of conscious duty, to recommend it to the most serious and prayerful consideration of those who have been thus easily moved, whether their conduct would not have been more Christian-like and exemplary had they first conversed with the person offending upon the subject, before they absented themselves from the house of worship. But though I am conscious of no impropriety of conduct in the case referred to, and though I have felt it important, under the present circumstances of our country, to persevere in the thing, yet I would ever be tender of the consciences of others, and, so far as duty will permit, become all things to all men, especially to my brethren. Upon these principles it is that I have consented to lay aside the token of my attachment to my country and religion this day, and upon similar occasions in this house of worship. I freely acknowledge it is entirely out of respect and in condescension to the conscience of a brother and officer in this church. At the same time I feel it my duty, upon all other occasions, to persevere in the thing, having, perhaps, as much conscience in the case as those who plead against it; and would call upon all of you who love your country, your families, and religion to come forward, and discover your fixed determination to defend your precious rights and privileges against every invasion, whether foreign or domestic, to the very last extremity. May we at the same time, one and all, be deeply penetrated and humbled before God, under a sense of our growing national and individual wickedness, and the cloud of judgments which hangs over us; and unite all our influence at the throne of grace in pleading with God, the sovereign Ruler of nations, that he would pour out his Spirit upon us, that we may become a holy, and so a happy people; that he would speed the triumphs of the Gospel through all nations, enervate the arm of tyranny and despotism, check the progress of anarchy and confusion, and cause that all men may be made acquainted with Jesus Christ, whom to know is life eternal."

Till near the close of his life no important measures were adopted by the town without his being consulted in reference to them, by a portion at least of the leading men. From motives of expediency he was not accustomed to vote in town affairs, but always deposited his suffrage, at the general elections, for officers of state and country. He always attended town-meetings long enough to open them with prayer. For this purpose he was waited upon at his house by the selectmen, who accompanied him to the polls and introduced him to his chair. Everything was conducted with quietness and order, and the spirit of the opening exercises was felt through the meeting. Since his day, and the changes which have taken place in the religious arrangements of the people, the time-honored practice of opening meetings for civil transactions with prayer,—a practice coeval with the earliest settlements in the country, observed by the fathers of the Revolution in Congress assembled, and by all our large legislative bodies, and by most of our smaller municipalities,—a practice recommended by the religion of nature as well as revelation, and certainly conducive, in a community not sunk in atheism, to order and right feeling,—has been generally abandoned, with what consequences will more fully appear when the experiment, if persisted in, has reached its results.

He was in like manner interested in the concerns of the commonwealth and nation. Educated amidst the exciting scenes of the Revolution, of which his father had been an active promoter, he felt, as every man should feel, a personal responsibility in the welfare of the country. In times of great political excitement he was accustomed to express his views among the people with openness and earnestness, but never, except on the rarest occasions, to bring what is called politics into the pulpit. In the war of 1812, sympathizing entirely with Governor Strong and the Federal party of that day, and totally opposed to the war as unnecessary and sinful, he sometimes on Fast-Days expressed his feelings on the subject from the pulpit, with an explicitness which could not be misunderstood. His disrelish of the war was heightened during the progress of it by an occurrence which cast portentous shadows over the town. Not only were there frequent alarms from the coast, occasioned by British vessels of war hovering in the vicinity of it, and excitement resulting from Boston merchants removing their families and effects inland, several of which families found shelter in Bedford, but on one occasion the entire militia of the place was called out. First, they were ordered to be ready at a minute's warning; then, after a few days, they were summoned to march immediately. The militia company contained the entire effective force of the place. All the middle-aged men and youth above eighteen years of age belonged to it. It was the Sabbath. The company assembled at noon on the common, and were marched by the captain, at the sound of fife and drum, into the house of God, that prayers might be offered for them and their families. The soldiers in their military attire filled the whole body of the house. They were to leave their homes, perhaps forever. They were to experience the hardships and perils and perhaps mortal sufferings of the field. Wives, children, mothers, sisters, were in tears. Prayers were offered, and a few words of exhortation were given by the pastor, at whose suggestion this service was now held. When it closed, the company was taken out upon the common again, and, after a few exercises and evolutions, marched off upon the road to Boston. The women and children and old men of the place gazed after them till the last plume of the officers had disappeared, and then returned into the church for the regular services of the afternoon. This return seemed like the coming back of mourners from the funeral of the town. For a day or two the silence and gloom which hung over the village was appalling. It appeared, however, that, through some mistake the wrong company had been summoned, and the militia of Bedford were permitted to return to their homes and farms, and to wait with momentary anxieties for further orders.

On the question of slavery, which divided the country from the beginning, he was always animated by the spirit of a Northern freeman. He had embraced too ardently the principles of the Revolution not to feel the wrong and suffer the mortification of the great anomaly in our institutions. Long before the Declaration of Independence, his father, without much reflection on the subject, had purchased a fine slave boy, by the name of Peter, from one of the farmers in New Hampshire who owned him. But after the war broke out, and long before slavery was abolished in that State, Mr. Stearns the elder began to feel the inconsistency between fighting for liberty and holding slaves. He accordingly called up Peter, when he was about nineteen or twenty years of age, and explained to him the principle of the Revolution, and its bearing upon his own case, and then proposed to the boy to take his freedom and "go with his (Mr. Stearns's) own sons into the army." Peter demurred and chose to stay with "Massa." But his master said, "I shall die by and by, and then if you are my slave you will have to be sold, and nobody knows who or where you will go to, or what will become of you." Peter still hesitated. But his master added, "If you will not take your freedom, I shall have to serve you as they did such persons in the Old Testament times,—bore your ears through with an awl to the door-post and make you serve forever." Peter shuddered, and finally said, "If I knew Massa would live as long as I do I would not take my freedom, but I s'pose now I'd better be free."*

The manumission of Peter, under the circumstances, made a deep impression on Samuel, then a small boy, and helped to fix in him those principles of universal liberty which were at that day held by the patriots of the South as well as the North.

Mr. Stearns's views respecting the Missouri Compromise will appear from a letter or two addressed to friends in Congress,

* An amusing anecdote is told of Peter, in respect to his first experience in the army. He was placed the first day on guard. He marched back and forth in his soldier-like pride till sunset, the time that he was accustomed to break off work. "Sun is down," said he, "I b'lieve I'll go to my tent." The officer in command was amused, and, knowing that there was no wrong intention, gave the young colored soldier a reprimand, pardoned his offence, and sent him back to his duty.

After Mr. Stearns had been settled in Bedford, and had seen nothing of Peter for many years, as the former was travelling in the winter through Bedford, he was obliged, on account of some accident to his sleigh, to procure another from one of the inhabitants. At the house of this man he met Peter, who was induced to visit Bedford and confer with his old master's son respecting their future course of life in reference to in the winter of 1821, while that exciting subject was under consideration.

To Hon. David L. Morrill he says:—

"I acknowledge the receipt of your excellent speech on the Missouri question, delivered before the Senate the last session. On one point in particular, viz. the Constitutional right of Congress to prohibit the introduction of slavery into such new States as should apply for admission into the Union; the evidence exhibited and reasoning used appeared to me not only perfectly satisfactory, but absolutely unanswerable. The liveliest gratitude is due to Heaven that there are men among those to whose guardian care the great concerns of the nation are intrusted, who have not only the ability, but undeviating firmness, perseveringly to plead the cause of suffering humanity, and to place themselves in the attitude of invincible opposition to a measure which is so evidently calculated to entail disgrace on our rising Republic, and wretchedness on unborn millions of our species. The very idea that the immense region extending from the Mississippi to the Western Ocean is to become a theatre of slavery, under our Republican banner, is too painful to be admitted."

To Hon. Timothy Fuller he says:—

"Unquestionably the patriots of the Revolution would have shuddered at the thought of thus extending slavery. So far from expecting an event like this, to me it is evident that the framers of our national Constitution consented to slavery as it then existed with the deepest reluctance, and as a kind of necessary evil which would spread no farther.

each other. After due deliberation and delay, Peter entered into bonds to live with Mr. Stearns; and he entered into bonds for himself and heirs to support Peter, for his services, to the end of his life. He was now called Peter Freeman, and remained with his new master till death.

Old Peter's memory is precious in the family. He made a profession of his faith in Christ a few Sabbaths before his death, and was buried in the part of the churchyard which has been assigned to the colored people of the place. It is a curious coincidence, that when, many years afterward, a long row of tombs had been erected by several citizens of the town jointly, just back of the African graves, and the builders had cast lots for the tombs, the one which fell to Mr. Stearns was exactly behind old Peter's grave, so that Peter rested by the door of his master's tomb.

[January,

Hence their care to prevent this evil beyond the limits of the then existing States. And, much as a closer union of the States was desired, it may be fairly doubted whether it were possible to have gained the consent of the Northern and Middle States to a Constitution which set no bounds to this inhuman and degrading evil. While they saw a mighty inconsistency in this whole system with our republican forms of government, they deemed it both impolitic and highly criminal in an enlightened Christian people. And shall we their descendants so soon prove ourselves unworthy such virtuous and high-minded progenitors? I hope not.

"But there is another view in which this mighty subject presents itself to an enlightened republican mind. We have long prided ourselves in the thought, not only that we are the most free and enlightened people on earth, but that we were the first to denounce that wretched traffic in human flesh which, to the disgrace of human nature, had so long been the scourge of no inconsiderable part of the globe. And shall we now, and at the very moment, too, when almost every civilized nation is following in our train, by one fatal act of the nation relinquish forever this proud elevation, and fall back to those barbarous times which are past?"

Mr. Stearns continued to hold the same general views concerning slavery to the end.

He was an earnest promoter of all the leading benevolent enterprises of the day, and contributed towards them to the extent of his ability, and often at no small sacrifices. He found that the free use of intoxicating drinks was demoralizing the town, and by preaching and private efforts, and general movements in the parish, endeavored to promote temperance. It was not till the latter part of his ministry that the modern reform by total abstinence took its rise.

But the influence of strong drinks in the parish and on society was a matter of constant distress to him, and many and patient were his efforts to correct the evil. He encouraged the moral societies of the times, and favored the law for posting the names of drunkards in public places, and forbidding any person to sell them intoxicating drinks. And when the total abstinence principle was discovered he cordially adopted and promulgated it.

He took a deep interest in the objects of the Christian Knowledge Society before it was essentially superseded by the formation of the Home Missionary Society, and had accepted a commission, so far as he was personally concerned, to labor for a season in some of the destitute settlements of the "District of Maine." But, on presenting the proposal to his people, it was so earnestly opposed, chiefly on the ground that it might be injurious to his health by some of them,—particularly by one or two who, many years afterward, led the opposition which exiled church and pastor from their house of worship,—that he gave it up.

In the meridian days of his ministry he was greatly admired as a preacher, not only in his parish, but everywhere throughout the circle of his exchanges. Overtures towards accepting a larger or higher field of labor were repeatedly made to him. But, according to the custom of the times, he had been settled for life, and looked upon his connection with his people as a sort of marriage covenant which none but the greatest reasons would allow him to break. He was also, it was often said, urged by some persons of the greatest influence in the ministry, who desired to place him in a high position, to write and publish, that his abilities might be more generally known. But he always totally refused to undertake anything of the kind, from such a motive, as unworthy a Christian minister, and inconsistent with self-respect. He believed, with Washington, that men should not seek for high positions, but be sought for. His modesty and sensitiveness on such subjects, though far better than the bold pushing of personal claims so common in our day, was sometimes probably carried too far, and tended to limit his influence.

As illustrative of his delicacy on all subjects of personal advancement, we remember that the question was gravely canvassed by him, with one of his sons, then a member of college, whether it was proper for a young man to apply for a school, if he was wishing to teach. The conclusion reached was something like this: "Once an application of that kind would not have been becoming, but the times have greatly changed and I cannot think, my son, that there would now be any impropriety in your informing Mr. ——, that you are intending to teach school, and, if it were desired, you would be willing perhaps to take the one under his care."

During the whole of his ministry he was singularly unexceptionable. Dignified and affable, free and entertaining in conversation, he never indulged in remarks or forms of speech, either in the pulpit or pastoral intercourse, to which fastidious delicacy could object. He was above suspicion in his personal character, and it is not known that calumny ever assailed it.

THE METHODS OF THE SPIRIT.

BY REV. CHRISTOPHER CUSHING.

THE uniformity of Nature is the source of the astronomer's calculations,—the basis of all science. Were it not for this operation of natural law the material world would be subject to contingency,—order would be reduced to confusion, and the systems of which the universe is composed become a chaotic wreck.

When we speak of the laws of Nature as uniform, from the Christian position, we mean simply the uniformity of the mode in which God operates in the material world. He is the author of the law. The law is only the expression of his will. He may have given a degree of efficiency to secondary causes, but He is himself the Great First Cause, without which all other agencies were inoperative.

Not only does the Author of the universe cause events in the sphere of matter to occur with uniformity, but He determines them by a natural necessity; so that there is, in no sense, a possibility, without a Divine interposition, of the result being different from what it is. As to the rising of the sun, the recurrence of the tides, the rarefaction of the air through the influence of heat, there is no contingency. The law acts with a resistless energy. The recognition of this fact suggests no difficulty, for natural law respects irresponsible matter.

When we enter the sphere of moral agency and contemplate events under the operation of moral law, there is at least a seeming difficulty in reconciling Divine efficiency and human responsibility. It is evident that unless God is certain as to results, then He cannot be supreme; but has made a world which He has no power to control. Shrinking from a view of the Divine Ruler as thus impotent, we claim, as a moral necessity of our own nature, that his fiat is authoritative and above all liability of defeat.

Whether this surety of the accomplishment of the will of God is spoken of simply as a "certainty," or, with Edwards, as a "moral necessity, improperly so called"; — whether it is traced, as in the Calvinistic view, to the Divine purposes, or, as in the Arminian view, to the Divine foreknowledge, it is a certainty still, and the throne of God is not a myth, but a Throne.

That man, as a moral agent, is free is matter of consciousness; and of nothing can we be more sure.

Whether we can satisfy our minds with the distinction between necessity, "properly so called," and certainty, and see that the mere certainty of an event is consistent with its freedom, or whether we accept both the Divine efficiency and human responsibility as matters of faith, with no attempt to reconcile them, believing that "what we know not now we shall know hereafter," the two facts remain, in our view, as cardinal.

The question then arises, Is there anything in the moral kingdom analogous to the uniformity of natural law? That human actions are not fixed by the same kind of necessity which controls events in the material world is evident; for such a natural necessity precludes the possibility of freedom. Does, then, the certainty of events under the moral government of God involve uniformity in the operations of moral law? In some sense it doubtless does to the mind of the omniscient Jehovah. But in the purview of man, the purposes of God are so partially revealed, and the uniformity of moral law is so imperfectly perceived, that with regard to future events, generally, we are obliged to speculate as to the probabilities of the case, in view of analogy, the known tendencies of things, and the experience of the past.

Sometimes the student of history, the statesman, or the Christian scholar, whose generalizations are drawn from a broad area of fact, will predict coming events with almost prophetic precision. So true is this, that in some sense and some measure there is, even to human intelligence, a reality in the uniform operations of moral law.

How is it when we enter the province of grace? Here there is not only the freedom of the human will, but also the sovereignty of God in the exercise of mercy. Is there any law, in accordance with which God dispenses his grace? If there is any such law, has it been revealed, or can it be discovered? The Scriptures assert that God "hath mercy on whom He will have mercy, and whom He will He hardeneth." Is it with Him simply a caprice? Or in the exercise of mercy does He act on such fixed principles as to involve in his dispensations the uniformity of law? He gives us, in His Word, the conditions on which we may be saved, and He knows, yea, determines, from all eternity, who will comply with these conditions.

In the Divine economy so ordered that man, by placing himself in given circumstances, or using given means of grace, ordinarily, or as by a law, becomes willing to comply with the conditions of salvation? Can parents feel certain, or confident, that, if they consecrate their children to God, and are faithful in training them for God, their offspring will experience the second birth? If so, is there any particular age at which they may expect this change to take place? Can Christians, as co-workers with God, so devise plans and employ means as to know that the conversion of souls will be the result? Can the minister of the Gospel so discover God's way of carrying on his work in the regeneration of men, as to feel sure that, if he plies given motives, or adopts given measures, religion will be revived and souls saved?

In a word, recognizing the Holy Spirit as the author of regeneration, what are the methods of the Spirit?

It is not proposed by the writer to advance any new theory, or make any attempt at sacred science. If we knew all the secret springs of human action, if we were familiar with all the facts of human experience hitherto, we might perhaps pronounce confidently upon future results, and recognize the law which prevails in the whole economy of grace.

That we may be wise to win souls it is important that we should study the Methods of the Spirit as illustrated in the facts of Christian experience.

The writer of this article, in examining persons for admission to the church, during a ministry of twenty years, has been accustomed to write out the most important facts given by each individual in the recital of personal experience. He has thus in his possession a record of the religious life of three hundred and eighty different persons. The illustrations thus afforded of the Methods of the Spirit are here presented, with the hope that, in themselves, and in what they may suggest, they will not be wholly destitute of interest or of beneficent influence.

1. Parental Relations.

Of these three hundred and eighty persons, one hundred and ninety-three had pious parents; one hundred and seventeen were blessed with Christian mothers, although their fathers were impenitent; eleven were the children of religious fathers but irreligious mothers; fifty-nine had no Christian example or instruction from either father or mother.

That three hundred and ten should have been the offspring of pious mothers is truly remarkable. The contrast between the number of Christian mothers who had impenitent husbands and the number of religious fathers who had irreligious wives is scarcely less noteworthy.

Do these facts throw any light on the true interpretation of the Scriptural declaration concerning woman, "She shall be saved in child-bearing"? (1 Tim. ii. 15;) or of the apostolic attestation, "The unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband"? (1 Cor. vii. 14;) or of the precept, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers"? (2 Cor. vi. 14.)

To pious parents as respects their children these statistics surely give abundant encouragement; and impenitent parents should be impressed by them with a sense of their responsibility to become Christians for their children's sake.

2. Baptism.

It is a curious fact that just one half of the three hundred and eighty persons were baptized in infancy. Is this, in the main, exceptional in its character, or does it indicate what is true generally? The whole number of additions by profession to the Congregational Churches in Massachusetts for the last ten years has been twenty-nine thousand three hundred and sixty-two. The entire number of infant baptisms in these churches for the same period has been eleven thousand eight hundred and ninety-three. Hence it cannot be true that half of our church-members generally were baptized in infancy.

Of the three hundred and eighty persons whose experience is made the basis of this article, two hundred and four had pious fathers, which exceeds only by fourteen the number who were baptized in infancy. It is not strange if pious mothers, who have faith in the duties and privileges of the Abrahamic Covenant, still sometimes neglect to publicly consecrate their children to God while their husbands are unprepared to unite with them in the vows of the Covenant.

3. Age when making a Profession of Religion.

The number of those who united by profession under the pastoral labors of the writer was two hundred and forty-two; and they gave their ages when they presented themselves as candidates for admission. The one hundred and thirty-eight who united by letter from other churches gave their ages as they were when they first made a profession of religion. The youngest when joining the church was eleven years; the oldest, eighty-seven.

Here is hope for the aged, and great encouragement for the young. One who did not make a profession of religion was hopefully converted when ninety-four years of age.

4. Length of Probation.

We give this term to the time between hopeful conversion and the public profession of religion. The shortest was three weeks, and the longest twenty-seven years.

The shortest were among those who came by letter. The usual probation of those who made a profession under the ministry of the writer being six or eight months. The average probation of the 359 was $2\frac{1}{2}$ years. Assuming that the average probation of the 21 unknown was the same, and deducting this time from the age of the 380 persons when they made a profession of religion, it appears that they were converted at the average age of $22\frac{1}{2}$ years; males at $23\frac{1}{2}$ years, and females at $21\frac{1}{2}$.

The length of probation illustrates not only the experience of individuals, but the customs of the New England churches.

5. Definite Time of Conversion.

It is frequently said that but few Christians can tell when they were converted; but the experiences under consideration indicate that this idea is incorrect. From the answers given when questioned on this point, we derive the following summary:—

Number who knew the exact time	276
" " " the day	8
" " " within 2 or 3 days	8

Number who knew the week	26
" " " the month	3
" " " within 6 weeks	1
" " " not the time	58

Of the 380 persons 20 were foreigners. Of these 3 were hopefully converted after they came to this country, and these 3 all knew the time when they experienced the change. Of the 17 foreigners whose hopeful conversion occurred in their native land, 14 could tell nothing as to the time. They were received into the church in their youth, and some of them from subsequent experience were convinced that they were not truly regenerated when they first joined the church. If European Christians rely too much on infant baptism, family training, and having children grow up Christians, do we not rely too little upon these things? Is it not often a fatal error when parents assume that their children will, of course, live for years in impenitence, and then be convicted, and have a marked religious experience?

Is the date of conversion ordinarily fixed by that event, or by the dawning of hope?

6. Period of Anxiety.

In the definite experience, common in America, in connection with the commencement of a religious life, there is usually a law-work, a period of conviction, involving deep distress, which precedes the exercise of faith, or the indulgence of a hope in Christ. This time of agonizing to enter the kingdom differs much in duration, in the experience of different persons. The length of this period of anxiety in the case of these 380 individuals was as follows:—

Less than a day	3
From 1 to 3 days	27
" 3 days to a week	30
" 1 to 2 weeks	50
" 2 " 3 "	56
" 3 " 4 "	33
" 4 " 5 "	10
" 5 " 6 "	14
" 6 weeks to 2 months	39
" 2 to 3 months	37
" 3 " 6 "	41
" 6 months to a year	13
" 1 to 2 years	8

Five years	1
Seven years	1
Unknown	17
Average, 11½ weeks.

Is the law-work a shorter process than formerly? Is the conviction of sin less deep? Has the idea that there must be despair before there can be hope become antiquated? Is religious experience more superficial than it was in Edwards's time? If there has been a change, is it through want of thoroughness in doctrinal teaching, or because the way to Christ is made more plain?

7. Early Habits as to Prayer.

The question is sometimes asked, "Should an impenitent person be urged to pray?" And the answer is given, "Yes, with a penitent heart." But is it better to pray with an impenitent heart than not to pray at all? Allowing that nothing is right which is done with an impenitent heart, is a person more likely to become a Christian who makes use of the forms of devotion, than one who neglects wholly, and in every sense, the exercise of prayer? What do the facts of experience indicate? Of the persons whose experience is under review we learn the following,—

Prayed habitually before conversion	186
" occasionally " "	73
Neglected prayer wholly before conversion	121

The number who prayed, as compared with those who did not, was more than 2 to 1.

This surely is an encouragement to pray. Were these impenitent prayers wholly, in every sense of the word, selfish? Of the 259 persons who prayed, 124 prayed before conversion, only for themselves; 45 prayed only for themselves and near friends; and only 90 prayed for mankind generally.

As respects the element of selfishness, where is the line between the prayer of the sinner and the effectual prayer of the Christian?

That only 45 should have ascribed their conviction directly to the preached word, so far as respects instrumentality, claims the notice of those who would rely almost exclusively, as means of grace, upon preaching. That 71 only should have attributed their first religious impressions entirely, or directly in part to ministerial labor, should be a lesson to those private members of the church who endeavor to throw the whole responsibility upon the ministry. It may be proof also of ministerial unfaithfulness. The ministerial influence, however, is prominent also in the ordinary means of grace, in revivals and in prayer-meetings and the number of persons reached by all these means was 202.

Is there not reason to suppose that many conversions are traceable to the sermon when they are actually traced by the converts to something else? May not some conversions be traceable to a different sermon from the one to which they are traced by the converts themselves?

The smallness of the number who attributed their first serious thoughts to the influence of the Sabbath school is very remarkable. It is customary in Sabbath-school Conventions to give the number of hopeful conversions in Sabbath schools. They may be conversions of members of Sabbath schools without being the result of Sabbath school influence.

The number of conversions resulting from the personal labors of private individuals may well encourage such efforts. The prominence which the Holy Spirit gives to the instrumentality of death is certainly notable.

That the coldness of the Church should have startled two persons, and made them feel that, as Christians would do nothing for them, they must do something for themselves, is an illustration of the wonderful condescension of God, who is ever "from evil still educating good." The manifest power of revivals is proof that they are God's cherished means of advancing his kingdom.

9. Prominent Motive in seeking Religion.

The motives which first influenced the mind, and the number of persons thus severally influenced, were as follows:—

Sense of duty	133
Desire for happiness	80
" " " and sense of duty	47
Fear of punishment	30
" " and sense of duty	8
" " and desire for happiness	7
Desire to be saved	6

Fear of death	2
Do not know	13

The first motive, or that which is most vivid at the first, may be selfish,—or at least one of self-love, and yet it may prepare the way for higher motives. That soul tortures itself needlessly which despairs of acceptance with God because it discovers that a "respect for the recompence of reward" enters into its first motives in seeking reconciliation. And yet the prominence of self in our early seekings after God is indicative of the depravity of our nature.

The idea may be suggested to some minds, that the experience of these 380 persons may have been shaped peculiarly by the character of the pulpit ministrations to which they were subject. But 138 united with the church under the pastoral care of the writer by letter,—and these 138 came from a great many different churches and communities. Of the 242 who united by profession of their faith, a few had been members of other churches, at an earlier period, and united by profession because they could procure no letters from the churches of which they were members,—for instance, some from Europe had lost their letters. Sometimes a member of a Baptist or Methodist church had been "dropped,"—some Methodist churches having adopted the rule that if any of their members move into a place where there is a Methodist church, and do not identify themselves with it within six months, they will not give them a letter or certificate after that time. One person belonged to a church which had become unevangelical, and therefore a letter from that church would not be recognized as valid. Thus a greater number than united by letter had passed through their religious experience, in connection with conversion, under a great variety of influences.

It is true that there is a general similarity in the educational influences of New England, and of these 380 persons, 348 were natives of New England, 12 from other States of our Union, and 20 from foreign countries. Yet it may not be incorrect to assume, that, in the great variety of means which the Holy Spirit employed in arresting their attention to religious things, and in the motives which led them first to seek the Saviour, as well as in respect to the other peculiarities of their experience, what is true of them is in the main true of the great mass of Christians in our land. What kind of preaching is most in harmony with the Methods of the Spirit as here illustrated? To what motives shall appeals be made?

It remains only to notice briefly,—

10. Subsequent Experience.

It may be of some interest to know whether these persons, after the struggles in connection with entering upon a religious life were over, had a peaceful experience of the love of Christ. It is certain that they did not find their troubles all ended as soon as they had once entertained the hope that their sins were forgiven. One act of submission, one hearty acceptance of Christ, did not bring them into a state of perfection, or secure to them the privilege of basking continually in the light of the Sun of Righteousness. They found the warfare had only begun, and that it was by a succession of struggles that they were to gain the ultimate victory. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." However, 234 of them represent their Christian experience to have been in a good degree uniform and happy; while 146 represent their hopes and fears to have alternately gained the ascendency. Some of them at times lost all sight of the Saviour, and, while mourning the hidings of his countenance, had again and again sought Him anew.

Are not the provisions of grace so abundant that Christians may, if they will, have more of heaven here on the earth? Would it not command religion to the world, and give it new power, if Christians knew more in this life of the joys of salvation? Shall the Church seek to gain influence with the world by becoming assimilated to it, or by drawing nearer to God?

Do not these statements as to religious experience, even though they may not all be scientifically reliable, still afford important practical instruction?

Learning the mind of the Spirit, studying the Methods of the Spirit, a great work remains for Christians, in their own hearts, to promote their sanctification; and in the world, to rescue it from eternal death.

"The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life; and he that winneth souls is wise."

A LAYMAN'S VIEWS OF THE NEW ENGLAND PURITANS.

BY EDWARDS A. PARK,
ABBOT PROFESSOR IN ANDOVER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

UNLESS a man guard his own property, he will be the prey of freebooters. If the author of a valuable work conceal his name, he is in danger of becoming a victim of wholesale plagiarists: this truth is well illustrated in the history of the quaint volume, entitled "Wonder-working Providence of Zion's Saviour in New England." Dr. John Eliot says of it: "This is a curious and scarce book; Hutchinson and Belknap have made great use of it." Dr. Eliot ascribes this work to Sir Ferdinand Gorges. It has been extensively ascribed to him by others, and is published as his in the "Gorges Tracts." But the well-known Rev. Thomas Prince, of Boston, says: "The true author was Mr. Johnson, of Woburn, in New England, as the late Judge Sewall assured me, as of a thing familiarly known among the fathers of the Massachusetts Colony." Being diffident of his own powers, this Goodman Johnson (as he is named somewhere in our colonial records) intended to hide his authorship of the volume, and therefore his graphic records have been appropriated by other writers, while he himself has been forgotten. But his views are eminently important, as they are the views of a business man, who, notwithstanding all the mistakes of which the types have made him guilty, states his own experiences and observations with an honest intent, and in a style almost as impressive as it is fantastic.

Edward Johnson was born in 1599, resided in the parish of Herne Hill, near Canterbury, County of Kent, England, and embarked at Southampton in 1630 for the new Colony of Massachusetts. He sailed in the same fleet, and probably in the same ship, with Governor Winthrop. He seems to have come as a trader, and to have pursued his occupation along the banks of the Merrimack. He speaks of it as "the pleasant river of the Merrimack"; "the famous river"; "the fair and large river"; "the broad, swift torrent of the Merrimack, a very goodly river to behold, were it not blocked up with some sudden falls through the rocks"; "the wide venting streams of Merrimack river, whose strong current is such, that it hath forced its passage through the mighty rocks, which causeth some sudden falls, and hinder shipping from having any access far into the land: her banks are, in many places, stored with oaken timber of all sorts, of which that which is commonly called white oak is not inferior to our English timber."

It seems probable, from the preceding intimations, that, in the words of Mr. Poole, he early "visited the present site of Lawrence, and perhaps of Lowell." At a later day, he was appointed by the Massachusetts Government to explore the Merrimack River to its source. This he did "with two Indian guides," and "with no little risk and hardship."

After having held a residence for some time in Charlestown, he returned to his native country; and re-embarked thence for New England in 1636. His name is entered on the list of passengers thus: "Edward Johnson, of Canterbury, joiner, and Susan his wife, seven children, three servants." The number of his servants indicates his respectable station. He had been not only a carpenter,—probably a ship-carpenter,—but also a farmer, and a man of some note as a soldier. He became the "Father of the town" of Woburn, in Massachusetts; was employed in various important military expeditions; was for twenty-seven years a member, and one year the Speaker of the Great and General Court; and was appointed a member of several highly responsible committees of the Legislature. In the words of Mr. Poole, he was "a man of marked ability, of considerable property, of deep religious character, a Puritan of the Puritans, and one who took a leading position wherever he was." "No New England writer was so observant as he of the business features and expenses of the enterprise, or recorded so many of the (business) statistics" of the Massachusetts Colony. Although he has given to his volume a sentimental title, "The Wonder-working Providence of Zion's Saviour in New England," yet it is a rich medley of practical items, and is pronounced by Mr. Poole to be "the most important book on the Massachusetts Colony that was printed during the first hundred years after the settlement." It is certainly remarkable that a joiner, a farmer, a trader, a founder of a new town, a captain, an active deputy to the General Court, a shrewd diplomatist, a man who spent a large part of his time in laying out townships in the wilderness, and was the Surveyor-General of the Colony, should have preserved such a tenderness and simplicity of religious sentiment,—such a fresh and child-like faith. He had an active, though uncultivated imagination, and was strangely fanciful in his style, although energetic and judicious in action.

His book was probably written at Woburn, commenced about the year 1649, finished in 1651, sent to England and there printed in 1653, published in 1654, and republished there in 1659. Parts of it have been printed in the Massachusetts Historical Society's Collections, and the whole of it is now republished for the first time in this country in a volume by itself. It is accompanied with valuable notes, an elaborate Historical Introduction, and a copious Index by its Editor, Mr. William Frederic Poole, the accomplished Librarian of the Boston Athenaeum.*

* It contains 490 quarto pages, is printed in a style highly honorable to the American press; but as only 260 copies are to be published, it commands a high price; some of the copies being sold each for $30, some

The writer of this book died April 23, 1672. He therefore lived thirteen years after it was first published. During all this time he kept its authorship a profound secret. But the volume contains many illustrations of the fact, that a great secret will be exposed by comparatively trivial details. "We are able," says Mr. Poole, "to identify this author by the very means he takes to screen himself from sight. On p. 192 he gives a list of the officers of the several military companies of the Colony. He says: 'The band of Concord led by Captain Simon Willard, being a Kentish soldier, as is Capt. Coggin';—'the band of Woburn, led by another Kentish Captain.' It is proved that the commander of the Woburn Company was Captain Johnson, and that he came from the county of Kent, England. Why should the writer suppress his name and give the others in full? This was the author's method of dealing with himself throughout the book. Another instance is on p. 186. He says: 'The Government of the Massachusetts sent two messengers on purpose to persuade them [Gorton and his followers] to come and have their cause heard.' Three messengers were sent; the third was Edward Johnson."—(p. ix.) This failure to state that the number of messengers was three instead of two, and that himself was one of the three, is in harmony with his usual style of self-forgetfulness. Sometimes he does remember his own person: thus he speaks of "one of the Gortonites, as shallow a pated scholar as myself, far from understanding Latin," &c.—p. 97.

Many of these errors are the work of the first printer or editor, and not of the author. In the present Article the orthography of the volume is not commonly retained, nor the punctuation. BY EDWARDS A. PARK,
ABBOT PROFESSOR IN ANDOVER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

UNLESS a man guard his own property, he will be the prey of freebooters. If the author of a valuable work conceal his name, he is in danger of becoming a victim of wholesale plagiarists: this truth is well illustrated in the history of the quaint volume, entitled "Wonder-working Providence of Zion's Saviour in New England." Dr. John Eliot says of it: "This is a curious and scarce book; Hutchinson and Belknap have made great use of it." Dr. Eliot ascribes this work to Sir Ferdinando Gorges. It has been extensively ascribed to him by others, and is published as his in the "Gorges Tracts." But the well-known Rev. Thomas Prince, of Boston, says: "The true author was Mr. Johnson, of Woburn, in New England, as the late Judge Sewall assured me, as of a thing familiarly known among the fathers of the Massachusetts Colony." Being diffident of his own powers, this Goodman Johnson (as he is named somewhere in our colonial records) intended to hide his authorship of the volume, and therefore his graphic records have been appropriated by other writers, while he himself has been forgotten. But his views are eminently important, as they are the views of a business man, who, notwithstanding all the mistakes of which the types have made him guilty, states his own experiences and observations with an honest intent, and in a style almost as impressive as it is fantastic.

Edward Johnson was born in 1599, resided in the parish of Herne Hill, near Canterbury, County of Kent, England, and embarked at Southampton in 1630 for the new Colony of Massachusetts. He sailed in the same fleet, and probably in the same ship, with Governor Winthrop. He seems to have come as a trader, and to have pursued his occupation along the banks of the Merrimack. He speaks of it as "the pleasant river of the Merrimack"; "the famous river"; "the fair and large river"; "the broad, swift torrent of the Merrimack, a very goodly river to behold, were it not blocked up with some sudden falls through the rocks"; "the wide venting streams of Merrimack river, whose strong current is such, that it hath forced its passage through the mighty rocks, which causeth some sudden falls, and hinders shipping from having any access far into the land: her banks are, in many places, stored with oaken timber of all sorts, of which that which is commonly called white oak is not inferior to our English timber."

It seems probable, from the preceding intimations, that, in the words of Mr. Poole, he early "visited the present site of Lawrence, and perhaps of Lowell." At a later day, he was appointed by the Massachusetts Government to explore the Merrimack River to its source. This he did "with two Indian guides," and "with no little risk and hardship."

After having held a residence for some time in Charlestown, he returned to his native country; and re-embarked thence for New England in 1636. His name is entered on the list of passengers thus: "Edward Johnson, of Canterbury, joiner, and Susan his wife, seven children, three servants." The number of his servants indicates his respectable station. He had been not only a carpenter,—probably a ship-carpenter,—but also a farmer, and a man of some note as a soldier. He became the "Father of the town" of Woburn, in Massachusetts; was employed in various important military expeditions; was for twenty-seven years a member, and one year the Speaker of the Great and General Court; and was appointed a member of several highly responsible committees of the Legislature. In the words of Mr. Poole, he was "a man of marked ability, of considerable property, of deep religious character, a Puritan of the Puritans, and one who took a leading position wherever he was." "No New England writer was so observant as he of the business features and expenses of the enterprise, or recorded so many of the (business) statistics" of the Massachusetts Colony. Although he has given to his volume a sentimental title, "The Wonder-working Providence of Zion's Saviour in New England," yet it is a rich medley of practical items, and is pronounced by Mr. Poole to be "the most important book on the Massachusetts Colony that was printed during the first hundred years after the settlement." It is certainly remarkable that a joiner, a farmer, a trader, a founder of a new town, a captain, an active deputy to the General Court, a shrewd diplomatist, a man who spent a large part of his time in laying out townships in the wilderness, and was the Surveyor-General of the Colony, should have preserved such a tenderness and simplicity of religious sentiment, — such a fresh and child-like faith. He had an active, though uncultivated imagination, and was strangely fanciful in his style, although energetic and judicious in action.

His book was probably written at Woburn, commenced about the year 1649, finished in 1651, sent to England and there printed in 1653, published in 1654, and republished there in 1659. Parts of it have been printed in the Massachusetts Historical Society's Collections, and the whole of it is now republished for the first time in this country in a volume by itself. It is accompanied with valuable notes, an elaborate Historical Introduction, and a copious Index by its Editor, Mr. William Frederic Poole, the accomplished Librarian of the Boston Athenæum.*

* It contains 490 quarto pages, is printed in a style highly honorable to the American press; but as only 260 copies are to be published, it commands a high price; some of the copies being sold each for $30, some

The writer of this book died April 23, 1672. He therefore lived thirteen years after it was first published. During all this time he kept its authorship a profound secret. But the volume contains many illustrations of the fact, that a great secret will be exposed by comparatively trivial details. "We are able," says Mr. Poole, "to identify this author by the very means he takes to screen himself from sight. On p. 192 he gives a list of the officers of the several military companies of the Colony. He says: 'The band of Concord led by Captain Simon Willard, being a Kentish soldier, as is Capt. Coggins'; — 'the band of Woburn, led by another Kentish Captain.' It is proved that the commander of the Woburn Company was Captain Johnson, and that he came from the county of Kent, England. Why should the writer suppress his name and give the others in full? This was the author's method of dealing with himself throughout the book. Another instance is on p. 186. He says: 'The Government of the Massachusetts sent two messengers on purpose to persuade them [Gorton and his followers] to come and have their cause heard.' Three messengers were sent; the third was Edward Johnson." — (p. ix.) This failure to state that the number of messengers was three instead of two, and that himself was one of the three, is in harmony with his usual style of self-forgetfulness. Sometimes he does remember his own person: thus he speaks of "one of the Gortonites, as shallow a pated scholar as myself, far from understanding Latin," &c. — p. 97.

for $20, some for $10. The present edition is designed to be, as far as practicable, a fac-simile of the original edition. The numerous "errors of construction, punctuation, and orthography," as well as those of dates and proper names, are retained, so that the reader may feel himself to be perusing the first imprint of the volume. Many of these errors are the work of the first printer or editor, and not of the author. In the present Article the orthography of the volume is not commonly retained, nor the punctuation. The community is under special obligation to the enterprising Publisher of the volume, Mr. Warren F. Draper, Andover, Massachusetts.

There are other minutiae in the volume which illustrate the difficulty of an author's concealing his own work. Captain Johnson was for nearly thirty years the "Recorder" of the town of Woburn which he founded; and his narrative betrays a notable familiarity with the affairs of this town, and of its church, and even of the Shawsheen river, which he says takes its rise near this town and is "one of the most considerable branches of the Merrimack. Mr. Johnson was a Captain, and his volume exhibits a wonderfully intimate knowledge of the military operations of the Colony. The very style of the book is impregnated with the military enthusiasm. We sometimes find it difficult to ascertain whether we are reading a proclamation from an earthly General or a proclamation from Heaven; whether we are reading of material or of spiritual swords. Our great Captain in the skies is described as sending forth his heralds at arms, and mustering brave men for the battle against the Indians, Gortonists, Antinomians, Prelatists, and all other enemies of the pure Church, and issuing to his soldiers a proclamation which seems to command them :

' See, then, you store yourselves with all sorts of weapons; spare not to lay out your coin for powder, bullets, matches, arms of all sorts; — although it may seem a mean thing to be a New England soldier, some of you shall have the battering and beating down, scaling, winning and wasting the over-topping towers of the hierarchy; — Lieutenants, Ensigns, and Sergeants! exceed not your places till experience, skill, and true valor promote you to higher honor; — Gentlemen, Corporals, and fellow-soldiers! keep your weapons in continual readiness, seeing you are called upon to fight the battles of your Lord, Christ.' — pp. 9—11.

' Assuredly the spiritual fight is chiefly to be attended, and the other not neglected, having a near dependency one upon the other; — the ministers of Christ are created field officers, — yea, every officer hath his own proper regiment; — whose office is to encourage the fighting soldiers, and bring on fresh supplies in all places of danger; to put the sword of the Spirit in their soldiers' hands; but Christ, who is their General, must only enable them to use it aright; — the forlorn hopes of Antichrist's army were the proud prelates of England, the forlorn [hopes] of Christ's armies were these New England people; the Lord Christ was pleased to command the right wing of his army to advance against the left wing of Antichrist; these being quite overthrown and cut in pieces by the valiant of the Lord in our right wing who still remain fighting.' — pp. 230—233.

This old book is interesting as illustrating the difference between the descriptions which a man gives of a trouble which he has never experienced, and the descriptions which a man gives of a trouble in which himself participated. Neither Mr. Everett nor Mr. Choate could produce exactly such an impression of the sufferings of our fathers as is produced by the following narrative written at the time of the sufferings, and by one who was familiar with the sufferers. One of Captain Johnson's chapters is entitled, — " Of the laborious work Christ's people have in planting this wilderness, set forth in the building of the town of Concord, being the first inland town." He lets us see the pilgrims traveling " through unknown woods and watery swamps," through thickets, " where their hands are forced to make way for their bodies' passage"; and, as they clamber over the crossed trees, their feet slip, and they sink " into an uncertain bottom in water, and wade up to the knees, tumbling sometimes higher, and sometimes lower." Wearied with this toil, they at length " meet with a scorching plain, yet not so plain but that the ragged bushes scratch their legs foully, even to wearing their stockings to the bare skin in two or three hours. If they be not otherwise well defended with boots or buskins, their flesh will be torn." Sometimes the blood trickles down at every step, sometimes " they travel, they know not whither, bewildered indeed without sight of sun, their compass miscarrying in crowding through the bushes." The Indian path is not above one foot broad, "so that a man may travel many days and never find one," and the pilgrims "sadly search up and down for a known way." They pursue their journey, "lying in the open air, while the watery clouds pour down all the night season and sometimes the driving snow dissolving on their backs, till the renewed morning give fresh opportunity of farther travel." When they reach the place of their destination, "they burrow themselves in the earth for their first shelter under some hillside, casting the earth aloft upon timber"; thus they keep "off the short showers from their lodgings, but the long rains penetrate through to their great disturbance in the night season." Amid all these troubles they gather their churches; and it is to be remembered that pastors "who have been tenderly brought up suffer the same inconveniences with their people." "In this wilderness work men of estates speed no better than others, and many much worse for want of being insured to such hard labor." The cattle died for want of convenient food, those "who had expected to feast upon swine's flesh were disappointed, the wolves commonly feasting themselves before them." The sheep could not thrive, the "horse had then no better success, which made many an honest gentleman travel afoot for a long time, and some have even perished with extreme heat in their travels." They have no English grain, barley or wheat or rye, and it is a "sore affliction" to them that they must live upon "Indian-bread and water." "Many in new plantations have been forced to go barefoot and bare-legged till these latter days, and some in time of frost and snow." "Their lonesome condition was very grievous to some, which was much aggravated by continual fear of the Indians' approach, whose cruelties were much spoken of." In their poor wigwams the pilgrims "sing psalms, pray and praise their God," "and verily the edge of their appetite was greater to spiritual duties at their first coming, in time of wants, than afterwards." (pp. 81-85.) Thus more than once does Captain Johnson speak of the Puritans as injured by their prosperity even in his own day.

There is internal evidence that Goodman Johnson was both a witness and a participant of the sufferings which he describes in his narrative of the conversations which were held on the Southampton wharf, when Governor Winthrop and his Colony set sail for America. Near that same wharf was indited in a subsequent age the hymn,—

"Sweet fields beyond the swelling flood Stand dressed in living green," &c.

"Pass on and attend with tears, if thou hast any, the following discourse, while these men, women, and children are taking their last farewell of their native country, kindred, friends, and acquaintance, while the ships attend them. Many make choice of some solitary place to echo out" their last farewell. "One says: 'As near as my own soul doth thy love lodge in my breast, with thought of the heart-burning ravishments that thy heavenly speeches have wrought!' Leaning their heads on each other's shoulders; having a little eased their hearts with the still streams of tears, they recovered speech again: 'Ah! my much honored friend, hath Christ given thee so great a charge as to be leader of his people into that far remote and vast wilderness. Alas! thou must die there, and never shall I see thy face in the flesh again! Wert thou called to so great a task as to pass the precious ocean and hazard thy person in battle against thousands of malignant enemies there,—there were hopes of thy return with triumph; but now, after two, three, or four months spent with daily expectation of swallowing waves and cruel pirates, you are to be landed among barbarous Indians, famous for nothing but cruelty, where you are like to spend your days in famishing condition for a long space!' Scarce had he uttered this, but presently he locks his friend fast in his arms; holding each other thus for some space of time, they weep again; but, as Paul to his beloved flock, the other replies: 'What do you, weeping and breaking my heart?' I am now pressed for the service of our Lord Christ to rebuild the most glorious edifice of Mount Zion in a wilderness. Then, my dear friend, unfold thy hands, for thou and I have much work to do, I and all Christian soldiers the world throughout.' Then, hand in hand, they lead each other to the sandy banks of the brinish ocean, when, clenching their hands fast, they unloose not till enforced to wipe their watery eyes whose constant streams forced a watery path upon their cheeks, which to hide from the eyes of others they shunned society for a time. Husbands and wives, brothers, sisters, uncles, nephews, nieces, 'the new married and betrothed man,' 'many reverend and godly pastors of Christ, some in a seaman's habit,' take their last farewell each of other, although natural affection will still claim her right, and manifest herself to be in the body by looking out of the windows in a mournful manner.—They lift up their voices and wept, adding many drops of salt liquor to the ebbing ocean. Then shaking hands they bid adieu with much cordial affection to all their brethren and sisters in Christ. Yet now the scorn and derision of those times, and for this their great enterprise counted as so many cracked brains, but Christ will make all the earth know [that] the wisdom he hath endued them with shall o'ertop all the human policy of the world." — pp. 26 - 28.

Although the metaphors of this undisciplined writer are strained and oddly mixed, yet sometimes there is a real beauty in them. Although his combinations of secular with sacred things are often grotesque, yet it is obvious that he makes the earthly subordinate to the heavenly. There is such a religious tone pervading the homeliest part of his narrative, that the actual incident is sometimes obscured by his spiritual reflections upon it. With child-like simplicity he alludes to the sea-sickness which his band of "wandering Jacobites" experienced even after their first embarkation at Southampton in 1636. The provident hand of the Lord was "diversly directed toward them purposely to point out the great hardships they must undergo," — and withal to tell them that "their victories would be much more glorious and joyful, eminently eyed of the whole world." On the voyage,

"The billows begin to grow lofty and raging, and suddenly bringing them into the vale of death, covering them with the formidable floods, and dashing their bodies from side to side, hurling their unfixed goods from place to place. At these unwonted works many of these people, amazed, find such opposition in nature, that her principles grow feeble and cannot digest her food, loathing all manner of meat; so that the vital parts are hindered from co-operating with the soul in spiritual duties, insomuch that both men, women, and children are in a helpless condition for present. And now is the time, if ever, of recounting this service they have [undertaken], and are about to undertake for Christ; but he, who is very sensible of his people's infirmities, rebukes the winds and seas for their sakes, and then the reverend and godly among them begin to exhort them in the name of the Lord, and from the Lord, being fitted with such words as much encourages the work they are going about. Many of their horses and cattle are cast overboard by the way, to the great disheartening of some; but Christ knew well how far his people's hearts would be taken off the main work with these things." — pp. 30, 31.

Several of the preceding extracts suggest the poignancy of the sufferings which our ancestors endured, in their view of the contrast between their situation here and their situation in their fatherland. Captain Johnson, being a man of affairs, draws a distinct picture of their pecuniary sacrifices in founding their Colony. After his minute account of their military operations, he informs us that,

"The officers and soldiers were very generous in their gifts; the Reverend Doctor Wilson gave bountifully for the furtherance of this wilderness work, the which was expended upon great artillery, his gift being a thousand pounds. Besides, many persons that came over the Lord was pleased to endow with a large portion of the things of this life who were not backward liberally to dispose of it, to procure means of defence, and to that end there was a castle built on an Island," [Castle Island,] &c. — pp. 194.

We can almost hear the words of this practical writer as he says to his "sorrowing fellow-pilgrims," —

"How you came by large inheritances, some of you, and estates of hundreds and thousands, yourselves best know; but believe it, the Lord intended it for this very work;—then let none of the people of Christ mourn that they have spent their wealth in this wilderness, if it have helped on the work. Rather rejoice that Christ hath betrust thee to be Steward for the King of kings, and that in so noble an achievement,—the worthiest work that the memory of ourselves and our forefathers can reach unto." — pp. 110, 111.

Much of the interest awakened by our sentimental Captain's narrative of business matters arises from its allusions to the delicate style in which many of our ancestors had been reared at home, and their consequent self-denial in sacrificing the refinements of their English life for the rudenesses of the wilderness.

"And here the Lord's mercy appeared much in that those who had been formerly brought up tender, would now contentedly feed on bare and mean diet." — "Even such men as scarce ever set hand to labor before, men of good birth and breeding, but coming through the strength of Christ to war their warfare, readily rush through all difficulties, cutting down of the woods,' etc.—'The chiefest corn they planted before they had ploughs was Indian grain,—and let no man make a jest at pumpkins, for with this fruit the Lord was pleased to feed his people to their good content, till corn and cattle were increased.' — pp 56, 57.

We often read of the Puritans as humble God-ward, but not so humble man-ward; as looking down upon the world, yet cherishing a profound respect for each other; as ready to forsake the noble universities of their fatherland, yet holding in the deepest reverence their own learned men, especially their own learned clergymen. The land - surveyor who recorded the "Wonder-working Providences" makes full confession of his own folly "in meddling so meanly with such weighty matters: being blinded by eager affection, he lost the sight of his great inability to the work." He uniformly manifests, however, the greatest deference for the "scholars of the upper form," who labored in this wilderness. "These did the Lord Christ cause to be trained up in learning, and tutored at the universities; and that very young, some of them, as the Reverend Mr. John Cotton at thirteen years of age." He often speaks of more than one pastor as "a very sweet, heavenly-minded man," and in the following narrative illustrates his admiration of the venerable Shepard of Cambridge. In this narrative he is describing himself, although with his wonted modesty he does not obtrude his name upon our notice.

"But to end this dismal year of 1636, take here the sorrowful complaint of a poor soul," who had come to the New World, — "this author came on a foggy morning," — "in order to find the powerful presence of Christ in the preaching of the Word"; but was surprised and saddened to learn as soon as he landed here, that fatal errors in religion had begun to disturb "these poor pilgrim people." He "brought him to a narrow Indian path, in which his serious meditations soon led him where none but senseless trees and echoing rocks make answer to his heart-easing moan. 'Oh,' quoth he, 'where am I become? Is this the place where those reverend preachers are fled, that Christ was pleased to make use of to rouse up his rich graces in many a drooping soul?' He then resolved to hear some one of these able ministers preach, and

"Turning his face to the sun [southwest from Woburn], he steered his course toward the next town, and after some small travel he came to a large plain; no sooner was he entered thereon, but hearing the sound of a drum he was directed toward it by a broad beaten way. Following this road, he demands of the next man he met, 'what the signal of the drum meant.' The reply was made: 'They had as yet no bell to call men to meeting, and therefore made use of a drum.' 'Who is it,' quoth he, 'lectures at this town?' The other replies: 'I see you are a stranger, new come over, seeing you know not the man. It is one Mr. Shepard.'" After this conversation the new-comer hastened to the place where "that gracious, sweet, heavenly-minded and soul-ravishing minister" was to preach; and where, "having stayed while the glass was turned up twice, the man was metamorphosed, and was fain to hang down the head often, lest his watery eyes should blab abroad the sweet conjunction of his affections, his heart crying loud to the Lord's echoing answer, to his blessed Spirit that caused the speech of a poor, weak, pale-complexioned man to take such impression in his soul at present, by applying the word so aptly, as if he had been his Privy Counsellor, clearing Christ's work of grace in the soul from all these false doctrines which the erroneous party had affrighted him withal; and now he resolves (the Lord willing) to live and die with the ministers of New England." — pp. 101-103.

The writers who describe the Puritans as establishing themselves in New England because they did not know enough to establish themselves in a better land, are also fond of representing them as morose and gloomy. But the preceding extracts illustrate their hopeful and cheerful spirit. Even during the first months after their landing, when they were threatened with scarcity of food,

"The valiant of the Lord waited with patience, and in the miss of beer supplied themselves with water; even the most honored as well as others contentedly rejoicing in a cup of cold water, blessing the Lord that he had given them a taste of that living water." "And also in the absence of bread they feasted themselves with fish; the women once a day as the tide gave way resorted to the muscles and clambankees which are a fish as big as horse muscles, where they daily gathered their families food with much heavenly discourse of the provisions Christ had formerly made for many thousands of his followers in the wilderness. Quoth one, 'My husband hath travelled as far as Plymouth (which is near forty miles), and hath with great toil brought a little corn home with him, and before that is spent the Lord will assuredly provide.' Quoth the other, 'Our last peck of meal is now in the oven at home a-baking, and many of our godly neighbors have quite spent all, and we owe one loaf of that little we have.'

Then spake a third: 'My husband hath ventured himself among the Indians for corn, and can get none; as also our honored governor hath distributed his so far, that a day or two more will put an end to his store, and all the rest; and yet methinks our children are as cheerful, fat, and lusty with feeding upon those muscles, clambankes, and other fish, as they were in England, with their fill of bread; which makes me cheerful in the Lord's providing for us, being further confirmed by the exhortation of our Pastor to trust the Lord with providing for us, whose is the earth and the fulness thereof.' And as they were encouraging one another in Christ's careful providing for them, they lift up their eyes and saw two ships coming in, and presently this news came to their ears that they were come from Jacland full of victuals. Now their poor hearts were not so much refreshed in regard of the food they saw they were like to have, as their souls rejoiced in that Christ would now manifest himself to be the Commissary-General of this, his army, and that he should honor them so far as to be poor sutlers for his camp. They soon up with their muscles and hie them home to stay their hungry stomachs. After this manner did Christ many times graciously provide for this, his people, even at the last cast." — pp. 49, 50.

Many of the preceding extracts illustrate the brave and joyous spirit of what this writer calls the "poor pilgrims." Their courage was fostered by their trust in God. When it is said that they took up their abode in New England because they were ignorant of any more inviting land, it is forgotten that they were intelligent men as well as confiding Christians. They were perfectly aware of the disadvantages under which they were laboring; they deemed it wise to remain under these disadvantages. They had faith in God, that, as during the first quarter of a century he had turned the wilderness into a garden, so, in the course of time, he would make this garden the joy of the whole earth. They adopted the principle of enduring hardness as good soldiers; for a life of stern labor is more promising for the future than a life of luxury. Captain Johnson says of Boston: —

"The hideous thickets in this place were such that wolves and bears nursed up their young from the eyes of all beholders, in those very places where [now] the streets are full of girls and boys sporting up and down." — p. 43.

Many of the New England colonists "wanted a warmer country, and every north-west wind that blew, they crept into some old chimney corner or other, to discourse of the diversity of climates in the southern parts." — p. 171.

The Massachusetts Commonwealth is described as a "remote, rocky, barren, bushy, wild-woody wilderness, a receptacle for lions, wolves, bears, foxes, raccoons, beavers, otters, and all kind of wild creatures, a place that never afforded the natives better than the flesh of a few wild creatures and parched Indian corn, inched out with chestnuts and bitter acorns; now, through the mercy of Christ, become a second England for fertility in so short a space that it is indeed the wonder of the world." — p. 173.

"It was not you, dear hearts, that chose this place, but the Lord, as seeing it most fit to do his work in, knowing that had you met with a rich land filled with all plenty, your heart would have been taken off this work which he must have done." — pp. 119, 120.

But although "this poor wandering people" were in a bleak climate, on a sterile soil, yet, in a few years, their land "not only equalized England in food, but goes beyond it in some places for the great plenty of wine and sugar, which is ordinarily spent." "In their feasts" the people "have not forgotten the English fashion of stirring up their appetites with variety of cooking their food, and notwithstanding all this great and almost miraculous work of the Lord in providing for his people in this barren desert, yet there are here as in other places some that use these good creatures of God to excess." — p. 174. "Besides, the Lord hath of late altered the very course of the heavens in the season of the weather, [so] that all kind of grain grows much better than heretofore; insomuch that merchantising being stopt at present, they begin to question what to do with their corn." — p. 120. *

* Our author often alludes to the changes which took place in the course of the seasons, for the benefit of the Christians who needed these changes.

After describing the produce of New England, the "wheat, rye, oats, pease, barley, beef, pork, fish, butter, cheese, timber, masts, tar, soap, plank-board frames of houses, clapboard and pipe staves"; after mentioning the laborers, the carpenters, joiners, glaziers, painters, gunsmiths, locksmiths, blacksmiths, nailers, cutlers, weavers, brewers, bakers, costermongers, feltmakers, brasiers, pewterers, tinkers, ropemakers, masons, lime, brick and tile makers, cardmakers to work and not to play, turners, pumpmakers and wheelers, glovers, feltmongers, and furriers; after stating that formerly the pilgrims were "forced to fetch most of the bread they eat and beer they drink, a hundred leagues by sea," but "they now feed, not only their elder sisters, Virginia, Barbadoes, and many of the summer islands that were preferred before [New England] for fruitfulness, but also the grandmother of us all, even the fertile isle of Great Britain; — besides Portugal hath had many a mouthful of bread and fish from us in exchange of their madeira liquor: and also Spain"; — after this glowing account of the Colony, the author says: —

"Thus hath the Lord been pleased to turn one of the most hideous, boundless and unknown wildernesses in the world in an instant, as 't were (in comparison of other work) to a well-ordered Commonwealth, and all to serve his churches." — pp. 208 — 210.

The very title of this book suggests one of the most remarkable characteristics of our Puritan Fathers. They believed not only in "Zion's Saviour," but also in His "Wonder-working Providence," and especially in His interpositions for New England. Wherever Captain Johnson travelled he saw God. He finds homely "sermons in stones." He narrates the following incidents: —

When the Plymouth Pilgrims were attacked by the Indians "one captain Miles Standish, having his fowling-piece in a readiness, presented full at them; his shot being directed by the provident hand of the Most High God, struck the stoutest sachem among them on the right arm," — just as the sachem was drawing an arrow from the quiver. — "You have heard of a hundred and ninety-eight ships passing the perilous ocean, of all which, I hear of but one that ever miscarried"; "their pilots missing oftentimes of their skill on those unwarmed coasts, but their Jehovah he misses not to be an exact pilot in the most thickest and darkest nights." — Unused to agriculture, the pilgrims broke up the hard soil, "being persuaded that Christ will rather rain bread from heaven than his people should want." "And further, Christ caused abundance of very good fish to come to their nets and hooks; and as for such as were unprovided with these means, they caught them with their hands; and so with fish, wild onions, and other herbs [they] were sweetly satisfied, till other provisions came in." — pp. 17, 18, 34 - 36, 53 - 58, 66, 170.

"And here the reader may take notice of the sad hand of the Lord against two persons who were taken in a storm of snow, as they were passing from Roxbury to Boston, it being much about a mile distant, and a very plain way. One of Roxbury sending to Boston his servant-maid for a barber-chirurgeon to draw his tooth, they lost their way in their passage between, and were not found till many days after; and then the maid was found in one place, and the man in another, both frozen to death. In which sad accident, this was taken into consideration by divers people, that this barber was more than ordinary laborious to draw men to those sinful errors, that were formerly so frequent (and now newly overthrown by the blessing of the Lord upon the endeavor of his faithful servants with the word of truth); he having a fit opportunity by reason of his trade, so soon as any were set down in his chair, he would commonly be cutting off their hair and the truth together. Notwithstanding some report better of the man; the example is for the living; the dead is judged of the Lord alone." — pp. 137, 138.

It is often said that Americans are characterized by a self-satisfied spirit, and are fond of rehearsing their good deeds, as well as predicting their future successes. This charge is founded on a style of remark which is not peculiar to the Western orators, nor to the present inhabitants of Massachusetts. Our fathers discoursed in the same style. Frequent instances of it are found in the volume of Captain Johnson. Describing the confederation which was formed in 1643, between the four Colonies, Massachusetts, Plymouth, Connecticut and New Haven, he says: —

"But herein the Massachusetts had the worst end of the staff, in bearing as much, or more charge than all the other three, and yet no greater number of commissioners to negotiate and judge in transacting of affairs concerning peace and war, than the least of the other; and any one of the other as likely to involve them in a chargeable war with the naked natives, that have neither plunder nor cash to bear the charge of it; nay, hitherto the most hath risen from the lesser colonies; yet are the Massachusetts far from deserting them, esteeming them highly so long as their governments maintain the same purity in religion with themselves." — p. 182.

The Colony of Virginia was not in former, more than in recent days, sufficiently grateful to Massachusetts. — "About the year 1642, the Lord was pleased to put it into the heart of some godly people in Virginia to send to New England for some of the ministers of Christ to be helpful unto them in instructing them in the truth as it is in Jesus." The Virginians however, did not long endure the plain preaching of the New England missionaries, but forced them to return home. "And now," says Captain Johnson, "attend to the following story, all you cavaliers and malignant party the world throughout! Behold ye despisers and wonder! O poor Virginia! dost thou send away the ministers of Christ with threatening speeches?" — Then follows a narrative of a terrible onslaught made by the Indians upon the men who had rejected the Massachusetts missionaries, and chose to retain a "priest of their own profession who could hardly continue so long sober as till he could read them the relics of man's invention in a common prayer-book." — pp. 227 - 229.

It may be truly said that the perpetrator of so many doggerel rhymes as came from the pen of Goodman Johnson has no claim to be cited as a teacher of ecclesiastical polity. It is interesting, however, to learn the opinions which were formed on this subject by a layman who, although an uneducated, was yet an instructed man; although not familiar with theories, was yet a man of careful observation; although not familiar with learned treatises on ecclesiastical government, was yet employed in laying the foundation of many townships, and was therefore conversant with the formation of many churches.

When he describes a company as "ready to swarm and settle on the building of another town," he says: "They gather into a church at their first settling; for, indeed, as this was their chief errand, so was it the first thing they ordinarily minded, to pitch their tabernacles near the Lord's tent." In giving the history of the town of Woburn, he describes the scenes which he not only saw, but in which he was the principal actor. In this description he states his own views of

The Manner of forming a Congregational Church.

"Now to declare how this people proceeded in religious matters, and so consequently all the churches of Christ planted in New England. When they came once to hopes of being such a competent number of people as might be able to maintain a minister, they then surely seated themselves, and not before; it being as unnatural for a right New England man to live without an able ministry as for a smith to work his iron without a fire. Therefore this people that went about placing down a town, began the foundation-stone with earnest seeking of the Lord's assistance by humbling of their souls before him in days of prayer, and imploring his aid in so weighty a work. Then they address themselves to attend council of the most orthodox and ablest Christians, and more especially of such as the Lord had already placed in the ministry; not rashly running together themselves into a church, before they had hopes of attaining an officer to preach the word, and administer the seals unto them; choosing rather to continue in fellowship with some other church for their Christian watch over them till the Lord would be pleased to provide; they after some search meet with a young man named Mr. Thomas Carter, then belonging to the church of Christ at Watertown, a reverend, godly man, apt to teach the sound and wholesome truths of Christ. Having attained their desires, in hopes of his coming unto them, were they once joined in church estate, he exercising his gifts of preaching and prayer among them in the mean time, and more especially in a day of fasting and prayer. Thus these godly people interest their affections one with the other, both minister and people. After this they make ready for the work, and the 24th of the 6th month, 1642, they assemble together in the morning about eight of the clock. After the Rev. Mr. Syme had continued in preaching and prayer about the space of four or five hours, the persons that were to join in covenant openly and professedly before the congregation and messengers of divers neighbor churches, among whom [were] the reverend elder of Boston, Mr. Cotton, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Allen of Charlestown, Mr. Shepard of Cambridge, Mr. Dunster of Watertown, Mr. Knowles of Dedham, Mr. Allen of Roxbury, Mr. Eliot of Dorchester, Mr. Mather. As also it is the duty of the magistrates (in regard of the good and peace of the civil government) to be present, at least one of them (not only to prevent the disturbance [which] might follow in the Commonwealth by any who under pretence of church-covenant might bring in again those cursed opinions that caused such commotion in this and the other Colony, to the great damage of the people, but also to countenance the people of God in so pious a work), that under them they may live a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty; for this cause was present the honored Mr. Increase Nowell. The persons stood forth and first confessed what the Lord had done for their poor souls, by the work of his Spirit in the preaching of his word, and providences, one by one; and that all might know [that] their faith in Christ was bottomed upon him as he is revealed in his Word and that from their own knowledge they also declare the same, according to that measure of understanding the Lord had given them, the elders or any other messengers there present question with them for the better understanding of them in any points they doubt of; which being done, and all satisfied, they in the name of the churches to which they do belong, hold out the right hand of fellowship unto them, they declaring their covenant in words expressed in writing." — pp. 177, 178. See also p. xcii.

Form of Ordination.

It is well known that there was a difference of opinion among the early Puritans in regard to certain ecclesiastical forms, and particularly the form of inducing a pastor into office. An allusion to these differences is found in Mr. Poole's Introduction, pp. xciv., xcv., also Letchford's "Plain Dealing," pp. 13-18. Mr. Johnson gives the following account of the first ordination at Woburn :—

"The twenty-second of the ninth month following, Mr. Thomas Carter was ordained pastor, in presence of the like assembly. After he had exercised in preaching and prayer the greater part of the day, two persons in the name of the church laid their hands upon his head, and said, 'We ordain thee, Thomas Carter, to be pastor unto this church of Christ.' Then one of the elders, Priest [misprint for present], being desired of the church, continued in prayer unto the Lord for his more especial assistance of this his servant in his work; being a charge of such weighty importance, as is the glory of God and salvation of souls, that the very thought would make a man to tremble in the sense of his own inability to the work. The people having provided a dwelling-house, built at the charge of the town in general, welcomed him unto them with joy, that the Lord was pleased to give them such a blessing that their eyes may see their teachers."

—179, 180.

Mode of Admission into the Church.

Mr. Johnson's account of this ceremony, as of the preceding, agrees substantially with that of Letchford. He says :—

"After this there were divers added to the church daily; after this manner: The person desirous to join with the church cometh to the pastor, and makes him acquainted therewith, declaring how the Lord hath been pleased to work his conversion; who, discerning hopes of the person's faith in Christ, although weak, yet if any appear, he is propounded to the church in general for their approbation, touching his godly life and conversation, and then by the pastor and some brethren heard again; who make report to the church of their charitable approving of the person. But before they come to join with the church, all persons within the town have public notice of it. Then publicly he declares the manner of his conversion, and how the Lord hath been pleased by the hearing of his word preached, and the work of his Spirit in the inward parts of his soul, to bring him out of that natural darkness, which all men are by nature in and under; as also the measure of knowledge the Lord hath been pleased to endue him withal. And because some men cannot speak publicly to edification through bashfulness, the less is required of such; and women speak not publicly at all. For, all that is desired is to prevent the polluting of the blessed ordinances of Christ by such as walk scandalously, and that men and women do not eat and drink their own condemnation, in not discerning the Lord's body. After this manner were many added unto this church of Christ, and those seven that joined in church-fellowship at first are now increased to seventy-four persons or thereabout; of which, according to their own confession, as is supposed, the greater part having been converted by the preaching of the word in New England; by which may appear the powerful efficacy of the word of Christ in the mouth of his ministers; and that this way of Christ in joining together in church covenant is not only for building up of souls in Christ, but also for converting of sinners and bringing them out of the natural condition to be engrafted into Christ; for if this one church have so many, then assuredly there must be a great number comparatively throughout all the churches in the country. After this manner have the churches of Christ had their beginning and progress hitherto. The Lord continue and increase them the world throughout." — pp. 180, 181.

Constitution of a Church.

Mr. Johnson makes various general remarks on the Nature and Power of a Local Church. Among them are the following:—

"The lording prelacy, popes, cardinals, bishops, deans, etc., were ordinarily brought up at the university to learning, and have most tyrannically abused it, usurping over the people of Christ, and exercised most inhuman and barbarous cruelty upon them; as also the Presbyterian Kirk by these provincial classes ; men of learning having robbed the particular congregations of their just and lawful privileges which Christ hath purchased for them ; each congregation of his being invested with full power to administer all the ordinances he hath ordained, in and toward their own members. And, further, learned men in some places, feeding the people for their tithes' sake in a parochial way, desire the upholding thereof lest their fat benefices should grow lean." — p. 98.

" Abuse not the free and full liberty Christ hath given you in making choice of your own officers, and consent in admitting into his churches, and casting out such members as walk disorderly. You are to walk in all humility, lest, in enjoyment of such freedoms as you formerly have not exercised, you exceed the bounds of modesty, and, instead of having your moderation known to all, your imbecility and self-exaltation be discovered by many, in admission of others into church society." — p. 6.

" Let the matter and form of your churches be such as were in the primitive times (before Antichrist's Kingdom prevailed) ; plainly pointed out by Christ and his apostles in most of their epistles, to be neither national nor provincial, but gathered together in covenant of such a number as might ordinarily meet together in one place, and are built of such living stones as outwardly appear saints by calling." — pp. 3, 4.

It was this doctrine of the purity of the churches, as composed of " saints by calling," which gave our author such exalted ideas of their future progress and final triumph. He describes his fellow-colonists as wandering Jacobites, who have come over "the boisterous, billow-boiling ocean, a few poor scattered stones, newly raked out of the heaps of rubbish ; but they have been so far exalted as to become living stones, laid in the walls of the temple, — a building which is to be the wonder of the world." — He says : " Let your profession outstrip your confession, for seeing you are to be set as lights upon a hill, more obvious than the highest mountain in the world, keep close to Christ, that you may shine full of his glory." — p. 6.

Power of Ecclesiastical Office-bearers.

" My friend, cast off as much of thy own power as thou canst, and beware of lording it over God's heritage ; but I pray thee, let Christ alone with his which he hath given to his pastors and teachers in administering the holy things of God, peculiar to their office ; and tremble, all you Presbyterians, who to please the people prostrate the authority Christ hath put upon the elders of his churches as officers to the resolute liberty of man. The people may and ought to call them to office to the which Christ hath united double honor and authority, and appointed them to be had in high esteem for their works' sake, being ambassadors of Christ Jesus. This may no man take from them, nor yet they themselves cast off ; and yet all this makes nothing for the papal, prelatical, classical, or parochial authority of the Presbytery, for it holds only in their ruling well. While they rule for Christ they must and shall have the power he hath put upon their office." — p. 99.

The Communion of Local Churches.

Mr. Johnson describes a " sad, unbrotherly contention which fell out among " members of the church of Hingham, " to the great grief of all other churches who held out the right hand of fellowship unto them in brotherly communion which may, the Lord helping, demonstrate to all the true churches of Christ the world throughout, although they be distanced by place or nation, yet ought they never to take up such an independent way as to reject the advice and counsel of each other ; for although the Lord Christ have completed his commission in giving full power to every particular church to exercise all his ordinances in, and toward their own body, yet hath the Lord so dispensed his gifts that, when the one want, the other shall abound, both in spiritual and temporal ; that by giving and receiving mutual love may be maintained, the entire truths of Christ continued, the churches of Christ supported, superiority of any may be avoided, and all such as raise discord among brethren may be retarded, the downfall of Antichrist and restoration of that ancient people of the Lord, furthered through the unity of Christ's churches the world throughout." — pp. 85, 86.

" Yet there are two sorts of persons in our native country whom the elders and brethren here do highly honor in Christ, and prefer before themselves, namely, the godly Presbyterian party, and the Congregational sincere servants of Christ; both which the author could wish that, with bowels of compassion, sweet sympathizing affection of brethren knit together in that transcendent love of Christ which couples all his distanced flocks together, they would seriously ponder this history, which, through the author's weakness, wants much of measure, but nothing of the truth of things so far as a shallow capacity can reach."

"Reverend and beloved in Christ I could your eyes but behold the efficacy of loving counsel in the communion of Congregational churches, and the reverend respect, honor, and love given to all teaching elders, charity commands me to think you would never stand for classical injunctions any more; neither diocesan, nor provincial authority can possibly reach so far as this royal law of love in communion of churches. Verily it is more universal than the Papal power, and assuredly the days are at hand wherein both Jew and Gentile churches shall exercise this old model of church government, and send their church salutations and admonitions from one end of the world unto another,—when the kingdoms of the earth are become our Lord Christ's. Then shall the exhortation of one church to another prevail more to reformation than all the thundering bulls, excommunicating, lordly censures, and shameful penalties of all the lording churches in the world. And such shall be, and is, the efficacy of this entire love one to another, that the withdrawing of any one church of Christ, according to the rule of the Word, from those that walk inordinately, will be more terrible to the church or churches so forsaken, than an army with banners."—pp. 104, 105.

"But, above all, beware of any love self-conceited opinion, stopping your ears from hearing the counsel of an orthodox synod; but, by daily communication one with another, impart Christ's mind each to other, that you may all speak one and the same things."—pp. 4, 5.

"These New England churches are near one hundred miles distant one from another, and yet communicate, counsel, care, love, joy, grieve with and for one another; dismiss some and commend others (as occasion serves) to the Christian care and watchfulness, from one church to another; and why may not this be practised the world throughout, even from Jerusalem and round about to Illyricum?"—pp. 201, 202.

Presbyterianism.

Many paragraphs in this quaint narrative illustrate the charitable feelings which Goodman Johnson cherished toward the Presbyterians. Still he clearly exhibits the difference between the Presbyterian polity and that of the early New England churches.

"Four sorts of persons, I could with a good will have paid their passage out and home again to England, that they might have been present at this Synod, so that they would have reported the truth of all the passages thereof to their own colleges at their return. The first is the prelates.—Secondly, the godly and reverend Presbyterian party who, had they made their eyewitnesses of this work, they had assuredly saved themselves much labor, which I dare presume they would have spent worthily otherwise than in writing so many books to prove the Congregational or Independent Churches to be the sluice through which so many floods of error flow in. Nay, my dear and reverend brethren! might not so much work of yours in writing and ours in answering have been a means to have stopped the height of this overflowing flood, and through the Lord's assisting have settled peace and truth in a great measure throughout the three nations?"—p. 118.

"In the latter end of this year [1634] two sincere servants of Christ, enabled by him with gifts to declare his mind unto his people, came over this broad ocean, and began to build the tenth church of Christ at a town called Newbury; their names being Mr. James Noyes and Mr. Thomas Parker; somewhat differing from all the former and after mentioned churches in the pre-eminence of their presbytery. And it were to be wished that all persons who have had any hand in those hot contentions, which have fallen out since, about Presbyterian and Independent government in churches, would have looked on this example, comparing it with the Word of God; and, assuredly, it would have stayed all the godly at least of either part from such unworthy expressions as have passed to the grief of many of God's people; and, I doubt not but this history will take off that unjust accusation and slanderous imputation of the rise of that flood of errors and false doctrines sprung up of late, as flowing from the Independent, or rather Congregational churches." — In this town [Newbury], which consists of about seventy families, "the souls in church fellowship are about an hundred; the teaching elders of this congregation have carried it very lovingly toward their people, permitting of them to assist in admitting of persons into church society, and in church censures, so long as they act regularly; but in case of their mal-administration, they assume the power wholly to themselves. Their godly life and conversation hath hitherto been very amiable, and their pains and care over their flock not inferior to many others, and being bound together in a more stricter band of love than ordinary, with promise to spend their days together, if the Lord please." — pp. 68, 69.

To this narrative Mr. Johnson appends some of his doggerel poetry, in which he addresses the two Newbury Ministers as "love's twins": "Though Christ's church-way you fully cannot reach."

Persecution of Heretics.

This curious volume gives numerous intimations of the manner in which our fathers justified their acts of persecution. In 1646 the General Court of Massachusetts appointed a Committee to draw up a body of laws for the well ordering of the little Commonwealth.

"To the end that the laws might be most agreeable with the rules of Scripture, in every county there were appointed as members of this committee two magistrates, two ministers and two able persons from among the people." In the year 1648 these laws were printed, so that they might "be seen of all men," and that none might plead ignorance; and that all persons intending to transport themselves to the colonies might know exactly what to expect: "For it is no wrong to any man, that a people, who have spent their estates, many of them, and ventured their lives for to keep faith and a pure conscience (should) use all means, that the word of God allows, for maintenance and continuance of the same." — Still further, these colonists "have taken up a desolate wilderness to be their habitation, and not deluded any by keeping their profession in huggermug, but print and proclaim to all the way and course they intend (God willing) to walk in; — If any will, yet notwithstanding, seek to jostle them out of their own right, let them not wonder if they meet with all the opposition a people put to their greatest straits can make." — pp. 205, 206.

BAXTER PARSONAGE, WEST NEWTON, MASS.

AT sunrise on the cloudless morning of the first Sabbath of 1863, Miss Sarah Baxter departed this life at her residence in West Newton, Massachusetts, at the age of seventy-two years.

Blest with an inheritance of this world's wealth, she is remembered as one who loved to minister to the necessities of the saints, and to relieve the poor of whatever name,

But the outflow of her benevolent heart was especially marked in her regard for the temporal comfort of her pastor, whoever he might be. Her house was one of his homes. Always welcome, he felt at home in her homelike dwelling, while she constantly contributed comforts to his own house. Though sympathizing with him in many trials, she especially felt that he ought to be relieved of anxiety, from any uncertainty as to his dwelling-place. It was not an entire surprise, therefore, when, after her decease, an item was found in her will, bequeathing to the Church in West

Newton, of which she was a member, the sum of $ 5,000, for the purpose of erecting a Parsonage, upon the conditions, that the sum, with accumulated interest, be made up to $ 8,000, and that the house be secured within four years from the date of her death.

Such was the origin of the Baxter Parsonage, of which the above is an engraving.

The Church accepted the legacy, and at a meeting held May 22, 1865, legally transferred the income of it to the Parish.

At a meeting of the Parish a Building Committee was appointed, who took the matter immediately in charge.

A corner lot, containing 20,000 square feet, was secured upon land recently laid open for building purposes, a plan adopted, and the house commenced in early summer of 1865. It was completed in January, 1866, and formally opened February 20. It is a building of two stories with attic and French roof, delightfully situated upon an eminence overlooking the village and the surrounding towns. It fronts to the south, and has a charming outlook from every point of the compass.

The above view is from the southeast, and will not appear natural to those who have seen the house, since it is usually viewed from the north.

The plan of the house is simple, and has in it some points of peculiar excellence for use as a parsonage.

The main building is 35 feet by 35. The wing 26 by 26.

On the first floor are two parlors, study, reception-room, dining-room, and kitchen, with two halls which communicate with each other. The front hall is spacious and commodious, the stairs rising in the rear of it, at a right angle with the entrance.

The rear hall divides the main building from the wing, thus securing the admirable arrangement of shutting off the culinary department by itself, and keeping its odors from filling the house. A portico covers the main entrance, and a piazza stretches the whole length of the main house on the northern side, accessible from the rear hall. The parlors are with folding doors between, and can easily be made one room, extending the whole length of the house, from which there is a view in three directions, which always fascinates the visitor.

The study is a sunny room in the southeast corner, furnished with a black walnut library case fastened to the wall.

The second story has six chambers and a bath-room, with the most ample closet room connected with each chamber.

The bath-room is very compact, conveniently arranged, and finished in oak and black walnut. It is furnished with hot and cold water. The attic remains unfinished, but will divide into four large chambers. The general arrangement will be easily understood from the following plans, which will explain themselves.

SECOND STORY.

C. Chamber.

B. Bath-Room.

It will be seen from these plans that every room in the house communicates with a hall, thus obviating the necessity of passing through any room to reach the outer doors. It will also be noticed that there is well-arranged, convenient inter-communication between the rooms. These two arrangements adapt the house to large parish gatherings. The whole house may be easily thrown together. An assembly of nearly two hundred people at the opening of the house were not at all crowded.

The house is heated with a furnace, while in the study and the parlors there are grates, with the modern improvement by which the ashes are received in the vault below, avoiding the dust and dirt in their removal. A cemented cellar eight feet deep extends under the entire house. The height of the walls of the first story is ten feet, of the second nine feet.

The house is a specimen of thorough workmanship, from cellar to attic. The builder was most faithful and conscientious in fulfilling his contract.

The experience of a year has proved the plan of the house to be admirably adapted to its use as a parsonage.

The architect and builder was Mr. Samuel Chapman of West Newton, to whom great credit is due for his hearty interest in the work.

The Building Committee were, Joseph Walker, S. F. Dix, Ira Hunter, Lawson Valentine, and Milo Lucas.

Owing to the increased price of labor and material, the cost of the house was much greater than was anticipated,—not far from $10,000. The cost of the land was $1,000.

On the evening of the 20th of February, 1867, the Parsonage was formally opened with appropriate services.

Statements as to the action of the Church and Parish, and the expense of the building, were made by Messrs. Walker and Dix of the Committee, after which addresses were made by Rev. I. N. Tarbox, and the present pastor of the church, Rev. H. J. Patrick. Rev. J. W. Wellman of Newton Corner led in the prayer of Dedication, and the following hymn, written for the occasion by Rev. I. N. Tarbox, was sung.

THE PROPHET'S CHAMBER.

When once, in Israel's evil day,
Beneath the monarch's wrathful frown,—
No place whereon his head to lay,
Elisha wandered up and down, —

A godly woman spake and said, ?
“ Let us a little chamber make,
Fit it with table and a bed,
And do it for the prophet's sake.

“ Let us add candlestick and chair ;
That, when the wanderer walks abroad,
He may come in, and we may share
The presence of the man of God.”

A prophet's chamber, neat and fair,
Is here, as in the ancient days ;
We hallow it with voice of prayer,
We hallow it with grateful praise.

Peace to this consecrated home !
May truth these sacred courts adorn !
And hence may Christ's pure message come
To generations yet unborn.

The example of Miss Baxter is suggestive. Though bequeathing a large portion of her wealth to the cause of Missions (the A. B. C. F. M.), yet there could be no benevolence more timely and true than in leaving to the Church in West Newton, a commodious house for its Pastor in all future years.

It were well for any who are just now thoughtful as to the disposition of their property, to consider that here is suggested one of the best possible posthumous investments,—a bequest full of blessing.

While parishes are so negligent, rich men and women should be more thoughtful. This subject is overlooked, and some pastor who is suffering from this cause should write out of his own experience an article for the Quarterly on the “ Obligations of every Parish to provide a Parsonage for its Pastor.”

It could be easily shown how much the brevity of modern pastorates is due to lack of permanency in a dwelling-place for pastors. Those ominous words “ For Sale,” in his hired house, have quickened the steps of many a happily settled pastor to another opening field. The testimony of one, now settled in Massachusetts, is the testimony of a large number. “ This was the chief thing which decided me to leave my first parish.” When will parishes learn, as one of the secrets how to keep a good minister, that they must give him an assured home of comfort. The grace of patience will have sufficient occasion for exercise, without driving him from pillar to post, and worrying his life out of him in the constant search for a place to shelter his family next year. Neither is the opportunity to study promoted by setting up his library annually in a new place, nor is it made more accessible by storage in the only attic attainable, or perchance in the loft of a horse-shed.

But we have neither time, nor is space granted to us in these pages, to speak of these evils and their remedy.

We can only testify of that relief and peace of mind which a certain local habitation has given to us, (for we often recall, by contrast, three memorable days of perplexity and despair after “ our hired house was sold,”) when, in response to our knocking, no door opened, and it was only left to us to come back and read with new interest and appreciation of its meaning the word of the Saviour: “ The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head.”

A benevolent parishioner had compassion, and at his own inconvenience took us in, until we could avail ourselves of the generosity of the good woman whose name is perpetuated in the Baxter Parsonage.

We are thinking now of a most excellent Pastor who was obliged to find a home in an adjoining town, during the last part of his ministry over the parish he has left but lately.

We often meet another brother who is now in a similar situation, save that he could find no house, only a boarding-place, and that in another town, adjoining his parish.

We also remember the remark of another highly-esteemed Pastor, when he had closed twenty years of his ministry, that "upon fair computation he had spent nearly five of those years in moving from one house to another."

Facts such as these could be multiplied indefinitely.

"Like people, like priest." When will

Parishes learn how to make as well as to keep good ministers. Nothing of external circumstance could have such a persuasive influence upon a Pastor as a good home provided by his Parish. It will be felt in his studies, in his pastoral work, in his varied duties, in his whole life. Out of the depths of his heart his gratitude rises for the possession of an undisturbed abode. He will be moved to a reconsecration of himself to the work of the ministry.

George Herbert left an Inscription on the Parsonage at Bemerton, addressed to his successors, which had a significance from the efforts and gifts of the saintly Parson, to secure such a home for those who should follow him.

"If thou chance for to find
A new house to thy mind,
And built without thy cost,
Be good to the poor,
As God gives thee store,
And then my labor's not lost."

DEMANDS OF THE PURITANS.

It has been often alleged that the Puritans were only ambitious of political eminence, having no conscience about their claims whatever, and that no religious principle was involved in the real question at issue. It would seem that the sacrifices they made to secure liberty of conscience were enough to convince the most sceptical that they were struggling for rights dearer than worldly fame, or even life itself. When the question of civil and religious liberty became identical, the friends of each and both made common cause in the fearful struggle, as was most natural; for the success or defeat of either involved the success or defeat of the other. But in the reign of King James a work of Dr. Ames, entitled "English Puritanism" thus declared the principles and demands of the Puritans, as quoted by "Hall," p. 97:—

"All that we crave of his Majesty and the state is, that, with his and their permission, it may be lawful for us to worship God according to his revealed will; that we may not be forced to the observance of any human rites and ceremonies; so long as it shall please the king and parliament to maintain the hierarchy or prelacy in this kingdom, we are content that they enjoy their state and dignity; and we will live as brethren among the ministers that acknowledge spiritual homage to the spiritual lordships, paying them all temporal duties of tithes, and joining with them in the service and worship of God so far as we may without our own particular communicating in those human traditions which we judge unlawful. Only we pray that the prelates and their ecclesiastical officers may not be our judges; but that we may stand at the bar of the civil magistrate; and that if we shall be openly vilified and slandered, it may be lawful for us, without fear of punishment, to justify ourselves to the world, and then we shall think our lives and all we have too little to spend in the service of our king and country."

Congregational Necrology.

REV. PARSHALL TERRY died in Troy, Geauga Co., Ohio, October 20, 1865, after an illness of one hour, aged fifty-nine years, wanting fourteen days.

He was the third son and sixth child of Moses and Anna Terry, was born November 3, 1806, and was a native of Aquebogue, Long Island, New York. His mother was a woman of remarkable piety, and, being for many years an invalid and nearly helpless, she often expressed the opinion that the Lord kept her here, when she desired so much to be with Him, that she might pray for her children. This she did most faithfully. When the subject of this notice heard of his mother's death, which occurred about five years since, he exclaimed : "Mother is gone! what shall I do for her prayers?"

He was hopefully converted at the age of eighteen, during a revival of religion in Flanders, where he was at that time, engaged in teaching. Almost immediately after his conversion his thoughts turned to the ministry, and he commenced studying with that in view, though he did not make a final decision with regard to his life labor, until he had considered the subject for several months.

He was married, June 3, 1826, to Miss Fanny B. Howell, of Riverhead. In the spring of 1829 he was licensed by the Methodist Society of New York, a body separate from the Methodist Episcopal Church. His first field of ministerial labor was in his native town, where he remained two years, receiving much favor, and gathering many souls. He also supplied, a part of the time, while in the Methodist connection, a Congregational Church at Wading River. In the fall of 1830 he was ordained by the Congregational Convention of Long Island.

After he had preached seven years on Long Island, with a good measure of popularity and success, being dissatisfied with his own theological attainments, though he had studied thoroughly under private instructions, he left an inviting field and a good salary at Patchogue, and removed to New Haven, Connecticut. There he studied and attended lectures three years, and was graduated theologically.

In the spring of 1840 he went to Lafayette, Onondaga Co., New York. He remained two years, a revival accompanying his labors. He then accepted an urgent call to the editorial chair of the Religious Recorder, a weekly paper published at Syracuse. He occupied that position three and a half years, supplying nearly every Sabbath a church in the country. In the fall of 1845 he went to Marathon, Cortland Co., where he labored six years. He found a feeble church, which was nearly doubled during his ministry.

He removed to Painesville, Ohio, in 1854, and labored there three years, with much success. A goodly number professed consecration to Christ, and about fifty were added to the church. In 1857 he went to Unionville, and labored two years. There were about twenty hopeful conversions under his ministry in that place, and the church received some accessions. He next labored three years in Thompson, and with very favorable results. Discordant elements were united, there were some conversions, the church was revived, its membership increased, and an old dilapidated house of worship gave place to a new one, neat, commodious, and substantial.

In the spring of 1861 he removed to Hudson, that his son might enjoy, at the same time, the advantages of home and school. The next year he went to Franklin Mills, and preached there one year. In the summer of 1863 he went to Troy, where he labored with great acceptance to both church and congregation two and a fourth years, but was not permitted to continue longer by reason of death. The last afternoon of his life was spent in pastoral visitation.

His funeral was attended, with appropriate exercises, on the following Tuesday, October 24, at the Congregational meeting-house in Troy, and his remains were taken to Painesville, to rest beside those of a daughter, who died during his residence there, at the age of twenty-six. Six other children had preceded him to the land unseen, all of whom died in early childhood. A widow, son, and three daughters survive him.

Mr. Terry possessed more than ordinary talents, both natural and acquired. He thought clearly, felt deeply, and spoke plainly. His sermons were eminently Scriptural, logical, and pungent, and he realized more largely than do most ministers the fulfilment of the prophetic vision: "The ploughman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed."

REV. ZENAS BLISS died in Amherst, Massachusetts, December 9, 1865, aged fifty-seven years and fifteen days.

He was born in Randolph, Vermont, November 24, 1808, the son of Shubael and Martha (Martin) Bliss. His mother was a woman of marked character, of a metaphysical mind, and much addicted to the discussion of such topics as "fixed fate, free-will, fore-knowledge absolute." He fitted for college at the Orange County Grammar School in his native town, and was graduated at the University of Vermont in 1831. In the fall of 1832 he entered Andover Theological Seminary, and remained there two years, after which he went to Fredonia, New York, and became associate principal of the academy in that place.

He was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Buffalo at Jamestown, September 2, 1834, and was ordained to the ministry at Sheridan October 28, 1835. For about two years he preached alternately to two churches in the vicinity of Fredonia, with little or no compensation. In the spring of 1837 he experienced a severe attack of spasmodic asthma, which assumed a chronic form, and so disabled him that he never ventured to assume the permanent charge of a parish. He preached, however, as stated supply, to various churches, for nearly seventeen years. In the fall of 1837 he commenced preaching in Quechee Village, Vermont, and there continued for two years. His health then becoming very poor he went to Virginia and spent a year, after which he returned to Vermont, and in November, 1840, became stated supply at Jericho Centre. There he remained two years, and then again went South for his health. In the fall of 1843 he became stated supply at Winooski Falls, and continued for a year.

In the fall of 1844 he went to Alabama, and remained there nearly four years, employed principally in teaching. He preached also as he had ability and opportunity. For several months he preached stately to a large congregation of colored people in Claiborne. In the fall of 1848 he became stated supply at Richmond, Vermont. Here he found a small, feeble, discouraged church, with which he remained till the spring of 1854, in the mean time raising by his own efforts the fund for building a parsonage and a house of worship. At the close of his service at Richmond he retired from the ministry, and removed to Amherst, where he employed himself on a small farm.

His only publications were an address on "The Philosophy of Temperance," and another on "The Idea of the Spiritual Interpretation of the Scriptures," both of them delivered before students of the University of Vermont. They are evidently the production of a mind of more than usual depth and originality of thought.

He married, May 2, 1835, Eliza Chamberlain, of Burlington, Vermont, daughter of Professor Jason Chamberlain, and by her had eight sons and two daughters.

P. H. W.

REV. JOSEPH FORSYTH died at Waterville, Province of Quebec, September 28, 1866, aged sixty-nine years.

The funeral took place on the 30th. After sermon by Rev. A. Duff of Sherbrooke, the remains were conveyed to West Hatley, and, after religious service there, were deposited in the burying-ground connected with that place of worship.

He was born on the 14th of May, 1797, at Wisbach, Cumberlandshire, England. Blest with a pious mother, he was led early in life to devote himself to God and his service.

In 1813, at about the age of sixteen, he united with the Methodist Church, and almost immediately after began to call sinners to repentance. The next seven years he spent mostly in his native shire, employed as what is called a local preacher; in 1822 he was ordained to the full work of the ministry, and for the next twelve years was successively at Holdsworth, Lynn, Petershead, Dunbar, Penrith, Isle of Man, Clackheaton, Pateley Bridge, Delph, and Gateshead. In all these places he was universally beloved, and his work successful. In 1828, at Penrith, he became acquainted with and married his beloved partner, who now mourns his loss.

In 1834, a difficulty occurring with the Methodists, concerning the Eternal Sonship of Christ, he voluntarily retired from that connection from conscientious motives, and joined the Methodist New Connection. For a period of three years he was still stationed at Gateshead, beloved by all the inhabitants of the surrounding country, where he labored incessantly, often beyond his strength, and sometimes preaching fourteen sermons in a week; he always preached three on the Lord's day, and many times every day of the week beside.

In 1838 one of the principal members of the Church was convicted of perjury, which the Conference justified, in consequence of which he again retired and joined the Wesleyan Association; he was then stationed at Newcastle, where he remained till 1851, when a new sorrow presented itself. One of the principal trustees of the chapel became bankrupt, and the minister was requested to make his house a hiding-place for some valuable plate; this of course was refused, and the consequence was he had a month's notice to leave the Church. From that time till 1848 he passed through many trials, though still at times engaged in his Master's work. In the above-mentioned year he came to America and spent two years in Boston and New York. In 1850 he was invited to take charge of the Presbyterian Church at White Plains, New York, where he remained till 1853: in that year he came to Canada, but his affections still clung to the Church of his youth and in which he commenced his ministry, and in 1854 he was induced to rejoin the Methodists. He commenced his labors in his new position at Wallaceburg, where he remained one year; afterwards he was successively appointed to Bruce Mines, Compton, Hatley, and Georgeville. But his trials were not yet terminated. In 1860 troubles arose which are too well understood in this part of the country to require explanation here. But the Lord Jehovah was still the support and strength of his soul, and though for a time trouble seemed almost to overwhelm him and his family, yet in God's own time a way was opened, and he received and accepted a call to the pastorate of the Congregational Church at Waterville, where he remained till called to his reward.

As a Christian the Rev. Mr. Forsyth was sincere, intensely earnest, and possessed of a clear understanding of Christ and his doctrine. No man could be stronger in his adherence to the truth and spirit of the Christian Church. He saw wrong and sin in their nakedness, darkness, and deformity; and he sought to expose them and to draw mankind from them. Popular infidelity received at his hands no friendship, apology, or neglect of rebuke. His whole nature and life was one roused antagonism to religious error.

As a student and a scholar he merited the commendation of all. His library large, his study ranged widely, and no man could be more impatient of superficiality. He had, when in health and even in sickness, almost incessantly read clearly and read to remember.

As a minister he was possessed of great ability, and for many years filled the most important places with great public satisfaction. His style was unusually clear and forcible. He made truth plain. He entered upon his duties with all his soul, might, and mind. He loved them, and all saw it. As he had so often prayed that he might, he died "with the harness on."

In respect to mind, nature had generously endowed him. He had a large, accurate, and ready mind. One seeing him, at first might have judged him slow and heavy. But not so; he clearly understood and readily expressed himself upon any subject he took up. A just, great, and well-stored mind has gone from earth to the rest he wearied for. He finished his course; he kept the faith; he wears his crown.

REV. SAMUEL W. BROWN was born in Winchendon, Massachusetts, on the 7th of April, 1828, son of Samuel and Phebe Brown.

At an early age he was deprived of both parents by death, and was left the only survivor of his father's household.

He graduated at Yale College in 1850, and entered immediately on the study of law in the office of Judge Mallory, at Philadelphia. After six months, his own funds being exhausted, and the sudden death of a friend having cut off the prospect of promised aid, he was obliged to leave his studies to employ himself in teaching.

In this work he spent about a year in New Jersey, and then went to Matagorda, Texas, where for several years he taught as constantly as his health permitted. In the spring of 1855 he returned to the North with the intention of completing his law studies, and resumed them with much interest; but meanwhile had conceived such disgust for the practice of that profession as led him finally to abandon all thoughts of it. About this time a struggle, which had been going on for more than a year in his mind, resulted in the determination to live and work for Jesus. An event which, by God's grace, seemed to prepare the way for this conclusion, was a fearful storm that in the autumn of 1854 visited Matagorda and vicinity, and by which many lives were lost and the whole region threatened with destruction. At this time of peril, Mr. Brown being placed providentially in a position of great responsibility, was led to pour forth earnest prayers on behalf of himself and those under his charge. For the year following the question of personal duty seemed to dwell upon his mind, for he saw that its decision might involve a revolution in almost every plan and habit of his life. When, however, the choice was fully made, it was an honest purpose, faithfully kept, which soon produced an evident change in the character and life. He became an earnest worker in Christ's kingdom; the more earnest because of his natural heartiness of disposition, and none the less successful because of his uniform affability and cheerfulness.

In October, 1855, Mr. Brown was married, and soon after took a share in a store at Ludlow, Vermont. At this time he had not considered the possibility of becoming a minister of the Gospel. Owing partly to the circumstances of his early life the study of the Bible had not been a favorite one with him until the time of his conversion. As he gradually became intensely interested in its great truths, and saw that he must speak for Jesus often and habitually if he would be true to himself and his Master, the feeling grew upon him that he was out of place.

But to devote himself at this time to the work of the ministry involved an entire change in the prospects of his family and the immediate use of all his property. It is not strange that he hesitated, but, God enabling him, the decision was made.

In the summer of 1858 he closed his business relations in Ludlow and, leaving his wife and children with friends in New Hampshire, repaired himself to the Theological Seminary in Chicago, designing to remove his family in the spring, and to settle permanently at the West. Circumstances, however, led to a change in his plans, and in May, 1859, he entered the school at Andover, where he remained until early in 1861. The illness of a member of his family induced his removal. In January, 1862, he became the stated supply of the Village Church in South Coventry, and continued there two years and five months, during which time two of his children died. On the 29th June, 1864, he was installed pastor of the church in Groton, in which charge he labored lovingly until his death, on the 9th of November, 1866.

As a Christian minister, his chief merit, and perhaps his chief power, lay in the sweet and tender spirit which made itself felt in almost every word and look. Men felt that he cared for their souls. His ministry was his life-work, and, as the years went on, he was more and more unwilling to turn aside from its peculiar duties for any purpose whatever. His only regrets during the weeks of his last sickness seemed to be that he could not go abroad among his people to execute plans which he had devised for their good. The last sentence he ever wrote expressed his wish that he might be more earnest and useful when he should recover than he had been in the past.

During his last days he seemed quite at rest with regard to the issue of his disease: "I have given it all up to God," he said. So he died, deeply lamented by his people and his brethren in the ministry; duly commemorated on the following Sunday in a sermon by the Rev. G. B. Willcox, of New London; followed to his grave in Coventry by numbers of those who had loved him as their pastor, and cherished still in their memories as a good minister of Jesus Christ.

His widow and two surviving children remain among the people, who supply to them their lack of relatives.

R. C. L.

MRS. LUCY A. GEROULD died in Stoddard, New Hampshire, January 12, 1867, aged thirty. She was a daughter of Moses and Hannah (Haynes) Merriam of Mason, New Hampshire.

A remarkably gentle, affectionate child, watchful to anticipate the wants of others, quick to render aid even where it required much self-denial, diligent and successful in study, she bloomed into early womanhood. She became interested in religion while at Appleton Academy, New Ipswich, New Hampshire, during a revival in the autumn of 1852. Says one who was with her at that time: "She did not experience that ecstatic joy many do in conversion, but such a look of happiness was seated on her brow, that she looked almost angelic." From that time Jesus was her all. She united with the Congregational Church at New Ipswich in March, 1853. In the autumn of 1855 she entered Mt. Holyoke Female Seminary, where she remained for two years. In the fall of 1858 she engaged in teaching in Coeymans, New York, but after a few months was obliged to desist on account of greatly impaired health. September 20, 1860, she was married to Rev. Samuel L. Gerould of Stoddard, New Hampshire. She entered cheerfully upon the duties devolving on her as a pastor's wife. By her gentle manners, by her great kindness and sympathy, by her unobtrusive yet earnest piety, she won the confidence and love of all who knew her. She sought out the poor and neglected, always taking particular pains to notice those whom others overlooked. The winter of 1863-64 she spent with her husband in Washington, D. C., where he was serving as an enlisted soldier in the army. It was while here she was attacked with the disease that ended her days. From this time till the day of her death she suffered from an unquenchable thirst and unsatisfied appetite, and yet resolutely abstained from the food and drink she craved, and ate only that which was disagreeable. Her life was probably prolonged nearly two years by her resolution in this matter. Her end was sudden but peaceful. Her last words were, "Jesus, Jesus, Jesus." Of her it can be said with truth, we believe, "She hath done what she could."

quickly removing to Licking County. Here, amid the disadvantages and privations of pioneer settlers, the boyhood of young Simeon was spent. The early rudiments of learning he received at home, the first school-house in that backwoods region being yet unbuilt. His parents being devout members of the Presbyterian Church, dedicated him to God in baptism in infancy, and were assiduous in training up their little ones in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. He was hopefully converted in his seventeenth year, and united with the church under the ministry of Rev. James Scott. From that time his mind was on the ministry, and preparation for entering college was at once commenced.

He pursued his academic studies at Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Pennsylvania, which he entered in May, 1829. He pursued his theological studies with Rev. Henry Hervey of Martinsburg, Ohio, in whose congregation Mr. Brown's father was at this time a Ruling Elder. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Richland, and in June, 1835, he was ordained and took charge of the church of Harmony. After laboring here two years and a half, he accepted a call to the church at Fredericktown in the same Presbytery, where he labored with much acceptance for six years, having many souls given him as the seal to his ministry. In 1844 he received and accepted a call to the first Presbyterian Church of Zanesville, Ohio, where he labored with acceptance and success for six years. During the two succeeding years he was agent of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, having his residence at Oxford, and then for several years was stated supply of the church of Pleasant Ridge, seven miles from Cincinnati. During his pastorate at Fredericktown, about the year 1841, Mr. Brown established a religious monthly called "The Calvinistic Monitor." After eight numbers were issued it became the "Family Monitor," Rev. John A. Dunlap being associated with him in the editorship, the place of publication being Marion, Ohio. About a year later the place of publication was changed to Springfield, Ohio, Mr. Brown ceasing to act as editor, and the name being again changed to "Presbyterian of the West." In 1853 Mr. Brown and Rev. Willis Lord, D. D., became editors of the same paper, then and since published in Cincinnati, and which had been conducted for sev-

REV. SIMEON BROWN, pastor of the Congregational Church, Ottumwa, Iowa, fell asleep in Jesus on Saturday morning, February 16, 1867, in the fifty-ninth year of his age.

He was born in Washington County, Pennsylvania, November 25, 1808; son of Ebenezer and Mary Brown. His parents removed to Ohio when he was yet an infant, settling first at Mt. Vernon, Knox County, and subseeral years with great ability by Dr. N. L. Rice. For about eighteen months he fulfilled the duties of editor in addition to ordinary pastoral labors.

In 1857 he sought connection with Congregationalists, becoming a member of the Miami Conference, and ministering to the Congregational Church at Lebanon. About the same time he organized the Congregational Church, of Waynesville, Ohio. From 1857 to 1863 he labored, for the most part, in the employ of the Home Missionary Society in Southern and Middle Ohio.

In November, 1864, he took charge of the church of Ottumwa, Iowa. Here he labored with great diligence and devotedness, and not without marked success. At the end of his first year's labor the Church was so strengthened and encouraged as to be able to dispense with further missionary aid, becoming henceforth self-sustaining. New and very deep interest was infused by his zealous labors into the Sabbath school and prayer-meeting, as well as the Sabbath services. The tone of piety in the church was greatly elevated, and pastor and people were greatly cheered by manifest indications of the Spirit's presence. Thirty-nine were added to the church during his two years of labor, thus more than doubling its membership.

But in the midst of his labors the summons came. He was attacked with pleuro-pneumonia, and after eight days' illness entered into rest.

Mr. Brown's attainments as a scholar were good. His acquaintance with literature in general, and particularly with whatever related to his own sacred calling, was extensive. And he was endowed with mental powers singularly clear, strong, and discriminating. He was a thinker. While he accepted the Word of God as his rule of faith and practice, he yet claimed the right to inquire for himself what that Word taught. On certain subjects, particularly the nature and extent of the Atonement, he used phraseology to which some members of the Presbytery to which he belonged objected. This led to unpleasant controversy. Mr. Brown maintained that his views were not only Scriptural, but in accordance with the doctrinal standards of the Presbyterian Church. It was this controversy that led him ultimately to the Congregational Church. To its polity and usages he became devotedly attached. He was an early and efficient laborer in the Temperance Reformation. From the commencement of his ministry, he was noted for his interest in Sabbath schools, and his earnest and efficient labors in teaching Scriptural truths to the young. He was a faithful pastor. His abilities as a preacher were eminent; and this eminence arose, not from the studied arts of elocution and rhetoric, but from the clearness with which he presented Divine truth. He brought none but beaten oil into the sanctuary, his sermons being uniformly written in full.

He was no time-server. Whatever he regarded as truth commanded his assent and controlled his action. If he was sometimes positive and even severe, it was the positiveness of one who had explored the ground on which he was treading, and felt that he had thought out to their logical results the truths he was uttering, and who had little patience with what was superficial or perverse.

Mr. Brown was the oldest of ten children. Of these Rev. William Brown died in 1849, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Marseilles, Ohio. Another brother, Rev. Aaron Brown, is pastor of the Congregational Church at Pleasant Hill, Missouri. One of his sisters is the wife of Rev. John Ustick of Earlville, Illinois. Mr. Brown was twice married. In 1834 he married Miss Lydia Cooke of Martinsburg, by whom he had seven children, only three of whom, one son and two daughters, survive him. His second marriage occurred in 1851, to Miss Evaline Brown of the vicinity of Cincinnati. By this marriage he had four children, only one of whom, little George Herbert, survives him, to comfort and cheer his afflicted mother. Mr. Brown's death is a felt loss, not alone to the church which he served, but to the whole community in which he labored. "Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaseth; for the faithful fail from among the children of men."

BOOKS OF INTEREST TO CONGREGATIONALISTS.

EVERY American scholar has occasion for national pride in view of the eminence to which our lexicographers have attained. Whatever may be true as respects other languages, we have shown ourselves masters of the English. The Messrs. Merriam have given proof of their enterprise and great business capacity, not only in publishing "Webster's Unabridged," but also in issuing various editions, more or less abridged, to meet the wants of every class in the community. Their latest edition* is more convenient for ordinary reference than the largest work, although it does not supersede the necessity of the "Unabridged" for the thorough scholar. Most of the few words in regard to the orthography of which Webster and Worcester differed are given in this edition in both forms, a compromise which may well end the controversy. This edition has also two novel sections in the Appendix,—(1.) a Glossary of Scottish Words and Phrases, and (2.) a Vocabulary of Perfect and Allowable Rhymes. The authors and the publishers deserve the patronage of the community and the thanks of every lover of letters for the facilities which they furnish for the thorough understanding and the free use of the best language known among men,—a language which is yet to be more generally known than any other on the face of the earth.

OUR Congregational Board has done a good work in publishing the lectures of Dr. Pond on Christian Theology.† The arrangement is obvious and logical. The style is eminently perspicuous, while it is not wanting in strength and beauty. Not only will the former students of this distinguished father in our churches gladly obtain this stately and well-printed volume to review and recall their former impressions, but every lover of sound religious literature will welcome so able and valuable a contribution to Theological science. A pupil of Dr. Emmons, and an admirer of that theological hero of his time, Dr. Pond gives, indeed, his own independent views, but modified to some extent by the strong, clear views of his teacher. The book deserves a wide circulation.

THE prize essay on Congregationalism by Dr. Pond * is a clear common-sense statement of our polity, and will do a good work if it can be widely circulated. We commend it to all who would like to see the principles of the fathers and founders of New England perpetuated and extended, as worthy their benefactions to secure its gratuitous distribution. By the generosity of the Messrs. Fairbanks of St. Johnsbury, Vt., it can be sold at $4.00 a hundred. Let it be scattered by the thousands !

A VALUABLE addition to the biographical department of our literature is furnished in the Life and Labors of Dr. Wayland,† just issued. The distinguished subject of this memoir was so identified with our public institutions, religious, literary, and political, that it is difficult to separate his life and labors from the history of his time; and, indeed, so much of the work before us is historical in its bearings, that, with slight changes, "The Life and Times of Dr. Wayland" would not have been an inappropriate title. Dr. Wayland was a worker. He had great powers of endurance, and untiring perseverance, good administrative abilities, and special largeness of soul. He was not remarkable for metaphysical acumen. He was wanting in imagination, and was in no sense a genius. And yet, in the balance of his mental qualities, in his generous sympathies, and in his consecration to God and humanity, he had but few equals.

He was born in New York City March 11, 1796, was graduated at Union College, studied medicine, became the subject of regeneration, spent a year in Andover Seminary, then was four years Tutor at his Alma Mater. He was five years pastor of the First Baptist Church in Boston, for a brief period was Professor of Moral Philosophy in Union College, and for nearly twenty-nine years President of Brown University. He introduced many changes into the regulations of the College, and greatly raised its literary and religious character.

He died at Providence September 30, 1865. No other man in his denomination in this country has stood so high as he; few men in any denomination have accomplished so much good.

This memoir would, in our judgment, be improved if it had been more condensed,—embracing less of what he said about his friends, and less of what they said about him. What the man did and what he was is of more consequence than what people thought of him. In view of what he did and what he was, he will live in the grateful memories of many generations.

No one who can read need be ignorant of the meaning of the precious words of Jesus.* Common sense, eminent scholarship, persevering industry, and a deep love of truth, and every other good quality of mind and heart, have been employed in explaining the great truths of revelation. The volume before us is beautifully printed and illustrated, on fine tinted paper, and contains the best efforts of the writer in making plain, in a few words, what might be obscure to the uneducated. The author says of this work: "It makes no pretence to learning, while at the same time it aims to give the conclusions reached by the best Biblical scholars—such as Alford, Lange, Olshausen, Bengel, Tholuck, Trench, Stuart, Robinson, Alexander, Hackett, Prof. Owen, and others—as to the true interpretation of the Sacred Word." The "Practical Thoughts" will be found very useful and suggestive. The division of the work into sections, and the large-faced type in which the words commented upon are printed, will afford help to the reader. This work will meet a very extensive want, and ought to have a large sale.

It is a great help, in understanding the meaning of much of the historical part of the Bible, to know all that may be known of the principal countries and cities which are prominently named in the Sacred Record. The volume before us opens with a chapter upon Ancient Cities and Empires,* and then one each on Egypt, Nineveh, and the Assyrian Empire, Babylon, Petra, the land of Bashan, the cities of Moab and Ammon, Philistia and its five cities, Tyre, Sidon, Samaria, Damascus, and the cities of Galilee, the seven churches of Asia, a general survey of Scripture prophecy. Every lover of the Bible would be interested in this book.

"GOLDEN TRUTHS"† are rightly named. They are the gems from the writings of some of the ablest and best authors of ancient and modern times, in prose and poetry alternately, on the "Inner Life," "Trials by the Way," "Work for Christ," "The Unfailing Friend," "The Heavenly Home." The work is a chain of brilliants, or rather each paragraph is a diamond in a most suitable setting in paper, typography, and binding. A small quarto of 243 pages, all together a beautiful book for the drawing-room table; a fit companion for the Bible in the closet of the most devout reader.

PART VII. of the great "Dictionary of the Bible,"‡ by Dr. William Smith, is issued, and fully sustains the high reputation its predecessors had justly secured. It is an invaluable work. WE are glad that the history of the great struggle for Christian and civil liberty in the Netherlands in the sixteenth century has been so attractively and truthfully written.* It was a very important period; and mighty scenes were then transpiring in other parts of the world. The great and persistent effort of the papacy to subjugate these sturdy Calvinists, and bring them under the Spanish yoke, was resisted by superhuman efforts. Alva found more than his match in the praying, devoted Prince and his confiding braves. Few books more interesting and instructive have fallen under our notice. It should be in all our Christian libraries for both older and younger readers. It is beautifully illustrated with engravings, and a map of the country.

THE lovers of Christian poetry will be happy to avail themselves of the beautiful hymns† newly given to the public by Dr. Palmer. When his labors of love on earth are over, and perhaps forgotten, he will still be remembered as a sweet singer in Israel.

THE Minutes of the several General Associations have almost all come to hand. As a whole, they show careful labor on the part of the several secretaries. Some of them show decided improvement. MAINE (157 pp.) is always good. Some slight defects as to clearness have this year been almost all remedied. If Brother Duren could separate "licentiates" from "ministers" in his reckoning of "churches supplied," and give a "total" of the State of Maine, exclusive of churches out of the State, we do not see what else we could ask for. The Minutes proper are this year preceded by 67 pages of "Churches and Ministers from 1672 to 1867, with occasional references from 1643 to 1671." This gives the supply of each church, with dates and many biographical references. It is a marvel of industry. Its value we find indispensable, in preparing a Triennial of Andover. The reports of the benevolent Societies, and of the Committee to visit Bangor Seminary, are in this issue, as usual.—NEW HAMPSHIRE has come only in a few sheets.—VERMONT (100 pp., including Missionary and Education Societies) is excellent, and beautifully printed. The new "Ministerial Record" supplies a want. If "first names" were given more fully, and "licentiates" distinguished in counting supplies, we could find no further criticism.—MASSACHUSETTS (Association, 64 pp.) is not quite what it ought to be, nor what it will be when that and the Conference are united. But, modestly, it is clear, and we ask brethren to look at its Summary, as including what we need in all.—THE CONFERENCE issue (68 pp.) is good for its own purposes.—RHODE ISLAND (32 pp.) is good, also, but lacks Summary of Pastors, etc., and of ministerial changes, licensures, etc.—CONNECTICUT (135 pp.) is above criticism. It cannot hold out so good.—NEW YORK (51 pp.) is vastly improved. It yet wants a "total" of New York alone, and lists of ministerial changes; we are assured these are to be given next year.—OHIO (48 pp.) improves steadily. This year it has the Welsh churches. Will our brother give us, next time, lists of ordinations, installations, dismissals, deaths, etc.?—INDIANA (22 pp.) is improved in statistical arrangement, by separating the churches into associations. It wants a Summary, yet, and lists of ministerial changes.—ILLINOIS (60 pp.) is a model in most things; wellnigh perfect in first names in "List." But we are not yet satisfied with the omission of Illinois churches belonging to other State organizations. In reply to a former criticism of ours, our patient brother says: "Until they love their own State well enough to unite with and report to some District Association which reports to us, we know no remedy, although very desirous to oblige and consult the convenience of our excellent statistical friend of Massachusetts. Due notice is therefore given 'to all whom it concerns,' that they will find the statistics of churches of this State who report elsewhere in the Minutes of States with which they are in associational connection." Our brother is mistaken: it is not our convenience, but that of everybody who wants to know how many Congregational churches and members there are in Illinois. To search through the Minutes of other States, and then add up, is beyond the convenience of most people. A good "remedy" might be, to apply to those churches for reports. In the mean time, the pages of the Quarterly will supply the lack. We miss "totals" of "pastors," etc., and lists of ordinations, etc. Still the Illinois publication has few equals. Its map, giving the locality of each church, is a unique and excellent feature.—MICHIGAN (52 pp.) gives us in its tables everything we want, and footed up. It has come this year among the best. List of changes is all it wants now.—WISCONSIN (48 pp.) satisfies our wants. It has separated its Presbyterian and Congregational churches, and presents a clear Summary.—IOWA (40 pp.) is also excellent. We can suggest but this lack: How many churches have pastors, and how many have stated supplies?—KANSAS (22 pp.) is greatly improved. It has inserted all the items we want. Its list of ministers formerly in Kansas, and of all recent churches, is a valuable historical contribution.—OREGON (20 pp.) needs to distinguish between pastors and stated supplies, to give a list of ministers without pastoral charge, and to give dates of the ordination of its ministers. Otherwise it is very creditable to our Pacific brethren.—CALIFORNIA (40 pp.) has sent a beautiful work; none could be better. CANADA (32 pp.) is always satisfactory. It wants only to distinguish pastors, and to give lists of ordinations, licentiates, etc. Most of the above are, however, deficient in one thing: we need a list of new churches; and one of churches dropped from the list, with the reason. In arranging the tables so that a particular column shall be of the same width on every page, according to our special request, there has been decided improvement this year. But there is room for more.

THE proceedings of the Middlesex Union Conference* (Mass.), October, 1867, is interesting and valuable.

THE Manual of the Congregational Church † in Plymouth, N. H., gives a historical sketch of the church, biographical notices of its ministers, and a list of its members (very excellently arranged and with all needed facts) since 1800. It is well prepared.

"THE Semi-Centennial* of the Congregational Sabbath School in Wethersfield, Ct.," contains, in addition to interesting historical memoranda, a thoughtful and sound address on "The Relation of the Sunday School to the Church." He advocates forcibly that the school is "a school of the church." While not suited to the independent habit of some excellent people, it is full of truth which the church needs.

THE Inaugural Address† of President Harris, at Bowdoin College, upon the "Necessity, the Idea, and the Methods of Collegiate Education," makes the college preparatory to the professional school for the discipline of the whole man, and not mere instruction in specialties. The interests of sound learning were promoted when the transfer was made from Bangor.

MR. NOYES's report‡ on Home Evangelization in Massachusetts shows unwearied labor in the great work before our churches. This pamphlet should be in the hands of every Christian who wants to know the needs of this one State, the methods of meeting them, and the grand progress making. The quiet but far-reaching plans of Mr. Noyes are beginning to show results, and to be appreciated. There is a great work to be done in securing the active occupation by every church of all waste places within their reach. The church which is to prosper now, is not that which shuts itself up inside its walls, but that which goes to preach the Gospel.

EDITORS' TABLE.

It will be seen, by our cover, that the editorial department has received an accession in the person of REV. CHRISTOPHER CUSHING. The other editors, speaking for themselves, extend hearty welcome to his participation in the abundant labors and undiscovered profits of this publication. The members of our churches interested in the Quarterly will receive the benefits of his extensive culture, his knowledge of our literature, his great industry, and his ripe experience as a successful pastor; while his official relation to the AMERICAN CONGREGATIONAL UNION will bring to the Quarterly the advantage of his labors in the great work of that Society. As first-fruits, the article from his pen in the present number is rich with the observations of years of bringing souls to the Master.

THE Quarterly has never had better prospects of usefulness than now. Entering on the tenth volume of a work begun without a subscriber, its pages have been enriched by the thoughts of the lamented JOSEPH S. CLARK, by the learning and reflection of our esteemed brother DEXTER, and by the work of a large number of the best writers in our ranks. These volumes contain history, polity, and practical discussions, invaluable to our denomination; and the annual records of our ministers and churches are unequalled, we venture to say it, in any publications of any other denomination. The denomination which has no power to require, as others can, annual reports, succeeds the best, by voluntary fraternal help, in gathering the statistics of its churches from Nova Scotia to California.

Yet we hope to improve on our past volumes. Our plans look to regular discussions of some practical feature of polity, to condensed but minute history of our denomination East and West, to biographical sketches of a high order, to results of religious and pastoral experience, to obituaries of all our brethren as they pass to their reward, to careful summaries of the statistics of other denominations, to the reproduction of old Congregational documents, and, in moderation, old records. The names of writers in our present number are indicative of the friendliness of eminent men.

We occupy, thus, a field which interferes with no other publication, and with which no other publication interferes. Whether it will ever become possible to unite the elements of our work with those of any other is in the future. At present, we shall do the best in our power to make this publication meet the evident wants of our churches, and advance the kingdom of our Lord. We are content to labor, when the same labor elsewhere would command pecuniary profit, in the conviction that the promotion of the unity of our denomination, East and West, is a good way to promote the success of the cause of Christ. We bring together the toilers on the Atlantic and Pacific shores. We try to simplify and make common to all the platform of our order. The observer cannot fail to see that nine years have made us a denomination.

We call especial attention to our Statistics this year. They have never been more carefully prepared than now. Never has the printer presented them in handsomer shape or more correct in an intuitive proof-reading. Best of all, we refer to the fact that the additions by profession in the past year are thousands in advance of any year since that which gathered in the fruits of the revivals of 1857-58. Our members number 43,000 more than ten years ago,—an advance of nearly 20 per cent; our numbers in Sabbath schools have made a net gain, in that time, of 183,000; the number of our churches is 365 more than then; and our ministers have increased by 600.

No more numbers for January, 1864, are wanted at the price named in our late circular.

WE are obliged to defer the insertion of a valuable communication on the Salem Witchcraft, and six to eight pages of obituary and book notices, already in type, on account of the change in our "List" of Ministers, and pressure of other matter.

AUTHORITIES AND EXPLANATIONS AS TO THE FOLLOWING STATISTICS OF THE CHURCHES.

I. AUTHORITIES. The publications of the several General Associations or Conferences are reproduced in the following tables; with reports in manuscript from sections where none are printed.

The changes in thus reproducing are these: The lists of churches, given in the State reports by Associations, Conferences, or Counties are here rearranged in alphabetical order for each State, including those churches, and those only, in existence at the date of the State reports.—State organizations do not always correspond with State boundaries; and churches reported by a State organization other than their own are transferred to their proper place; which changes the "total churches" given in State Minutes.—The order of columns of figures, slightly varying in different States, is made uniform.—The tables, as furnished, are carefully scrutinized and sometimes amended by correspondence with the secretaries.—The names of pastors and acting pastors are inserted or erased, according to changes occurring since the printing of the State publications, and down to the time of the printing of these pages.—The first names of ministers are inserted in the "List of Ministers," often at great expense of time; but they are, this year, left in the tables as printed in the State Minutes, that comparative completeness may be evident.—No alterations of figures are ever made (except in correcting errors, on proper authority); but the Totals of several States are altered by the transfer of churches above mentioned.—"Last year's reports" are invariably struck out (except in Maine, through inadvertence); but the aggregate of such, for all churches this year enumerated but making "no report," is included in the Summary of each State (if such church has reported within three years); which also sometimes affects the Tables.—Omissions or insertions of names of pastors or acting pastors, on account of changes subsequent to the printing of the State Minutes, are not allowed to alter the Summaries then given in respect to the pastoral relation. Nor is the insertion of names, erased as pastors, in the several lists of "other ministers," allowed to change the original counting of those lists; but they are altered by the transfer of names of ministers reported by a State body from whose territory they have removed to the State where they actually reside.—A blank signifies, invariably, "no report," and is never equivalent to "none."

II. EXPLANATIONS. As to churches: towns are arranged in alphabetical order in each State; churches in each town according to age; and of each church, —1st, its town; 2d, its name or number; 3d, its locality in the town.

As to ministers: the position of all in pastoral work is designated where reported. Pastors (settled, or installed) by "p." others by "s. s." (stated supply), "s. p." (stated preacher), or "a. p." (acting pastor),—which three terms, used in different States, are equivalent to each other. The two dates following "ministers" denote, respectively, the year of ordination, and that of commencing labor with the church mentioned. "Licentiates" are not reckoned as ministers. Churches supplied by "licentiates," or by ministers of other denominations, are reckoned as vacant; but the names of such are inserted, and the fact and number mentioned in the Summary of each State. Post-office addresses are to be found in the "List of Ministers" following, and not in the tables.

As to church members: the month of reckoning differs in different States, as will be seen by noticing the headings to each page. "Absent" are included in "males," "females," and "totals." "Additions," "Removals," and "Baptisms" cover the twelve months preceding the date given in the headings of each State.

As to Sabbath Schools: the entire membership at the mentioned date is given; not the "average attendance"; except in Iowa, which gives only the "average attendance."

Items not common to all the States, but collected in any, are merely aggregated, in the Summary of each State.

OTHER MINISTERS.

Henry Benson, s. p., Union.
Richard Crittenton, Towanda.

Samuel Fairley, Philadelphia.

Dana Goodsell, Philadelphia.

Burdett Hart, Philadelphia.

Iren W. Smith, Upsonville.

LICENTIATES.—None reported.

SUMMARY.—The extremely defective returns render a summary almost impossible. We have, however, a complete list of the churches and ministers. For the unreporting churches, we estimate according to manuscript authority from old reports. The ADDITIONS, etc., are from 21 churches only.

CHURCHES: 3 with pastors; 13 with stated supplies; 26 with ministers not specified as to pastoral relation; 10 pastoral condition not reported; 14 known to be vacant (including one supplied by Presbyterian).

TOTAL 66.

MINISTERS: 3 pastors, 11 stated supplies; 20 in pastoral service not designated; 6 others. TOTAL, 40.

CHURCH MEMBERS: 534 males; 756 females; 2,850 not specified. TOTAL, 4,140,—absentees scarcely reported.

ADDITIONS IN 1866-7: 235 by profession; 129 by letter. TOTAL, 364.

REMOVALS IN 1866-7: 27 by death; 63 by dismissal; 2 by excommunication. TOTAL, 92.

BAPTISMS IN 1866-7: 76 adult; 44 infant.

IN SABBATH SCHOOLS (25 churches): 2,347.

CHANGES.—Churches: New,—Knoxville, Philadelphia (Plymouth ch.), Picture Rocks. Welsh,—Carbondale, Cwmbrua, Dr. Riserville, Ebensburg (North), Ebensburg (South), Jeansville, Olyphant, Philadelphia, Rushdale, Shenandoah, Summit Hill, Ta Maqua, West Bangor. Dropped from the list,—(Welsh churches,) Bellmont, Bradford, Broad Gap, Dundaff, Garnagae, Harrisburg, Old Mines, Pittston, Scranton, Slate Hill. Spring Creek appears as West Spring Creek. Doubtless some of the new are the same as some dropped, under different names; but we cannot tell which.—Net gain of members, 558.

MINISTERS: No report. From Quarterly,—Pastor ordained, 1; pastor installed, 1; pastor dismissed, 1. Deceased,—1 without charge.

ORGANIZATION.—Eleven churches are connected with the General Association of New York; one with the General Conference of Ohio. The CONGREGATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA includes churches in that section. The Welsh churches are in the PENNSYLVANIA WELSH CONGREGATIONAL UNION ASSOCIATION.

DELAWARE.

The church at Canterbury, reported last year, has been disbanded, and there is now no Congregational church in Delaware. Net loss of members, 14.

MARYLAND.

OTHER MINISTERS.	H. R. Grannis. Robert F. Kabus. John Kimball. George F. Needham. Danforth B. Nichols. Ebenezer W. Robinson. William Russell.	E. Goodrich Smith. Eliphalet Whittlesey. William Whittlesey. LICENTIATES.
John W. Alvord, General Sup't of Schools, Freedmen's Bureau. Charles W. Blaikie. Samuel C. Fessenden. Solomon P. Giddings.		A. J. Downing.

CHANGES.—None in church list. Four missionary stations out of Washington give hopeful indications. Rev. Harvey Hyde has formed a church, and built a house, at Independent Hill, Prince William Co., Va. Rev. Joseph R. Johnson has a house in progress, and a church soon to be formed, at Herndon, Fairfax Co., Va. In other places Sabbath schools are formed and churches expected. An exploring agency, it is hoped, will find other localities in Virginia.—Net gain of members, 30.

ORGANIZATION.—The ASSOCIATION OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA was formed in May, 1867.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Newbern,	1866	Alfred A. Ellsworth, a. p. 1862[1865]	15

OTHER MINISTERS.—S. S. Ashley, Wilmington.
Frederick A. Fiske, Raleigh.

CHANGES: None in list. Net loss of Members, 5.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

			Dec. 2, 1867.	1867.	1867.	1867.
Charleston, Plym'th ch., 1867	1866[1867]	Benjamin F. Jackson, p.e.	74[140]214	0[35]41[76] 2[0] 0[2]	270	270

OTHER MINISTERS.—E. W. Merritt, Charleston. Thomas K. Noble, Beaufort.

CHANGES: New church, Plymouth ch., Charleston. Rev. B. F. Jackson has recently gone to this church. The church is worshipping in Military Hall, but expects soon to remove to the chapel of the new school building. A collection taken up on Thanksgiving, for the purchase of a lot of land, amounted to $520.—a beginning. Several of the church members are looking to the ministry. "Good men are greatly needed. We could find work for twenty-five to good advantage in this State." The new school building is to accommodate a Theological School under the care of the Rev. F. L. Cardozo, a native of Charleston, and graduate of Glasgow, Scotland. The ADDITIONS, etc., above, include only the time since April 14, 1867, when the church was organized.—Total net gain of members, 214.

SUMMARY.—CHURCHES: 22 with pastors; 98 with stated supplies; 39 vacant (including 3 supplied by licentiates). TOTAL, 159.

MINISTERS: 22 pastors; 81 stated supplies; 41 others. TOTAL, 144.

CHURCH MEMBERS: 3,596 males; 6,934 females. TOTAL, 10,530 (apportioning 164 not specified),—including 1,298 absent.

ADDITIONS IN 1866-67: 850 by profession; 540 by letter. TOTAL, 1,390.

REMOVALS IN 1866-67: 99 by death; 503 by dismissal; 32 by excommunication. TOTAL, 634.

BAPTISMS IN 1866-67: 377 adult; 280 infant.

IN SABBATH SCHOOLS: 13,137.

NUMBER UNDER PASTORAL CHARGE (125 churches): 28,883.

CHANGES.—CHURCHES: New,—Arena, Lewis Valley (1867), Lima (1867), Menomonie, Mill Creek, Mondovi, Tafton. Dropped from the list,—Blake's Prairie, Dover, Onalaska, Pleasant Prairie, Poynette, Sterling, Wyalousing. Richmond appears as New Richmond. Two churches in Delafield were last year erroneously counted (by us) as one church,—making total then 158 instead of 159.—Net gain of members, 62.

MINISTERS: Not reported. From Quarterly tables and lists above, we gather,—Pastors ordained, 2; pastors installed, 5; pastor dismissed, 1; ordained without installation, 3. Deceased, 2 without charge.

ORGANIZATION.—The churches are united in seven District Conventions, and through them, in the PRESBYTERIAN AND CONGREGATIONAL CONVENTION OF WISCONSIN, which includes seventeen Presbyterian churches (one of which is in Illinois). Eight Wisconsin churches belong to the Minnesota General Conference. The Presbyterian churches in Convention are given below, but not included in Summary.

Rev. Bro. Tade gives us, December 6, 1867, a list of churches as follows: Dalton (Geo.), Levi Brotherton; Spring Place and Smith Chapel, Tenn., Rev. Mr. Lane; Center Hill, Whitefield P. O. (Geo.), B. W. Walden; Zion Hill and Pleasant Valley (Cleaveland P. O., Tenn.), William Wicher; Hamilton, Tenn., Rev. Mr. Swafford; C— Creek, Rev. Mr. Himes; Ducktown, Rev. John Bell. (These we defer arranging until next year, when we hope for figures.) He says: "The above churches were organized before and during the Rebellion. The knowledge I have of these churches I came in possession of while engaged in looking after the interests of the schools of this country. These churches are doing well as could be expected. Here are nine or ten churches unknown and uncared for only as they could help themselves, and with next to no knowledge of any sister churches of kindred spirit. . . . Can't we have a well man, able and willing, and who believes Congregationalism adapted to the wants of the poor and the ignorant. . . . A dozen more could be organized in East Tennessee, with good prospects, if we only could have the right man." We commend this field to the Home Missionary Society.

MINNESOTA.

We regret that we have failed to secure the statistics of this State. In a newspaper account of the meeting of its GENERAL CONFERENCE, it is stated that eight new churches had been received into the Conference, "making the whole number 74." This number, "74," doubtless includes the eight Wisconsin churches which are reported by that Conference from year to year,—leaving the number in Minnesota, 66. This agrees, also, with the result of adding the 8 new churches to the 58 of last year. We have no means (not already tried) of obtaining a summary of members, additions, etc. Should the reports yet arrive, we shall insert the correct "totals" in the General Summaries.

NEBRASKA.

We fail to get returns from Nebraska. The Quarterly tables give one new church, viz. Columbus, organized November, 1866. If report arrives, its "total" will be found in the Summary.

In the above table, note.—1. The figures in the third column—"not specified"—do not imply that the number of churches situated have no "pastors," but that the statistical reports do not distinguish between "pastors" and "acting pastors." Yet the great majority of such churches have "acting pastors" only.

2. The churches "not supplied"—most of them—have regular preaching, but no minister engaged for regular service. Further, 66 are reported as supplied by licentiates or men of other denominations.

3. The sixth column of figures—"condition not reported"—states that the churches reckoned in it make no report whether they have a minister or not. Probably all of them are unsupplied.

4. The tenth column of figures includes some pastors, but most reckoned therein are acting pastors; but the failure to report exactly prevents us from distributing them. Acting pastors are often practically equivalent to pastors,—the only difference being the absence of actual installation.

5. The number of ministers "not in pastoral work," in most of the States, includes only such as are members of some Association or Conference. When persons not thus members cease to be pastors or acting pastors, they necessarily cease to be reported; and their names are not found until they are again in pastoral work. The "total" is thus yearly too small. The names of those who appeared last year, but, not being reported this year, could not be inserted in the regular list, are given in a supplementary list. Of those enumerated as not in pastoral work, many are supplying different pulpits from Sabbath to Sabbath. "TOTAL MINISTERS" and those "not in pastoral work" include 17 additional, found in preparing "List of Ministers."

6. "Benevolent Contributions" do not include current expenses, building or repairing churches, paying church debts, or any other similar expenditures. The amount above was given by 1,911 churches. The States marked "not reported" do not collect the statistics of contributions.

7. ~~MS.~~ We shall print, in our April number, revised Summaries.

In the above table, note,—1. The “totals” of church members, additions, and removals, in several States, and so in the last footings, exceed the sum of particulars. This is because the “total” is occasionally given, with no report of the particulars whose addition makes such “totals.” The “totals” are correct; but the “males” and “females,” the “professions” and “letters,” the “deaths,” “dismissals,” and “excommunications,” are slightly less, as reported, than they ought to be.

2. The “excommunications” sometimes include, though not with strict accuracy, the number of persons whose names are dropped from church lists on account of long absence. Yet it is believed that this is done to only a slight extent.

3. In “Sabbath Schools,” Iowa reports the “average attendance” only; the other States report the actual membership at the date of reporting.

4. The names of churches making no report are inserted in their proper place; and for all of them,—although against the names the several columns are left blank,—past reports (if any are found within three years) are included in the summaries of the respective States. While this gives a fair approximation to the total membership, the report of “additions,” “removals,” and “baptisms,” is too small by just the number those churches might have reported. This has been the case each year. Yet an inspection of the lists of delinquent churches shows that no large number could be added to the respective columns by full reports.

5. The reports from the States, etc., starred, viz., Minnesota, Louisiana, Nebraska, Utah, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick, are copied from last year's table.

The above table is inserted as a hint of what ought to be reported in the several State Minutes, rather than as a complete statement of facts. Several States have made great improvements this year, in this particular,—such as Maine and Vermont; but there is room for many more. From those which give the information, we copy; for others, we compare their present lists with those of the previous year, and search the Quarterly Record, in the Quarterly. In the last case, the year is assumed to end with the month next previous to the meetings of the several General Associations. The columns under "Churches," "Sabbath Schools," and "Contributions," are comparisons with the same items in last year's Summary.

Some qualifications ought to be mentioned. The comparisons are made with last year's actual figures, when some were then slightly erroneous.

In Connecticut, the gain in "Sabbath Schools" is due in great part to a change from "average attendance" last year, to "total membership" this year.

In New York, the loss of churches is principally due to the dropping of "Independent" churches, or such as belong to Presbyteries under the "Plan of Union"; to one church duplicated last year; and to one dropped as being in Pennsylvania. The totals are affected by the same cause.

In Pennsylvania, the list of churches so changes from year to year as to make comparison rather unprofitable.

In District of Columbia, the "Sabbath School" gain is over "no report" last year.

In Michigan, two of the churches dropped are transferred to Indiana and Ohio.

In Wisconsin, two churches last year, obscurely reported in the same township, were counted as one; there is really no gain.

In Iowa, the "Sabbath School" falls from "total" to "average."

In Canada, the loss of members is by our making no estimate for churches which have failed to report for the fourth time.

CONCLUSIONS.

CHURCHES.—The number of churches exceeds that of last year by 47. This includes none formed since the end of the statistical year.

The number of churches reported as supplied by ministers bears proportion to the whole number, .7500; last year, .7548; the year before that, .7588. The relative proportion of churches supplied by "pastors" and "acting pastors," it is impossible to show; inasmuch as 130 churches this year (299 last year, 569 the year before) report ministers, but without distinguishing between "pastors" and "acting pastors." Of those distinguishing in both this year and last, the ratio of pastors and acting pastors is almost precisely the same in the two years.

The number of church members exceeds the number last year by 10,612. The gain or loss in the several States appears in Table III.

The additions by profession are reported 7,632 more than last year,—Minnesota, Nebraska, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick, not reported.

The additions by letter are 2,227 more than last year.

The deaths are .01578 (allowing the unreporting States to be as last year) on the total membership; last year, .01653; the year before, .01778.

Baptisms of adults are 3,406 more than last year; of infants, 881.

Sabbath Schools show an increased membership of 27,187; considerable of which is due to the difference in reporting in Connecticut.

Contributions are reported in only part of the States; and, this year, defectively in those reporting, especially in Massachusetts; the returns are so imperfect (comprising reports from only 1,911 churches), that we have not added up the column. Yet there is probably a diminution of contributions.

MINISTERS.—The number of ministers, as reported in Summary I., shows an increase of 54. The excess of ordinations over the deaths, in Summary III., is 26. It is useless to try to make these figures harmonize. The list of ordinations is incomplete; there is no distinct record of men who settle over Presbyterian churches, nor of those who come from Presbyterian churches; nor is there any record (except by omission) of men who quietly drop out of the ranks of the ministry. The "total ministers" is itself too small by the omission of names of men who are not in pastoral work, nor members of any ecclesiastical body. It is impossible to get a list of such; nor does it seem desirable. The names of men who do not care to affiliate with their brethren in any tangible way would swell our lists uselessly. Yet, as some who appear in one year sometimes disappear only by removal, a supplementary list of those reported last year but not reported this year, follows our "List of Ministers," but is not included in the Summary. Our rule, as to ministers not in pastoral work, is to insert only those who are reported by the several State Associations, or vouched for, as in regular standing, by the respective Secretaries. We have no authority to insert or omit.

The Supply. The number of vacant churches appears to be 719,—which is to be diminished by that portion supplied by licentiates or ministers of other denominations,—leaving 583. The number of ministers not in pastoral work (and not including foreign missionaries) is reported at 907. Of this number, we find (from imperfect returns) 80 Presidents, Professors, etc., of colleges and theological schools; 84 secretaries and agents of societies; 45 city or county missionaries, chaplains, and missionaries to freedmen; 21 teachers; 5 educational officials; and 5 editors. Deducting these, we have 667 unemployed by the churches, to 583 churches to be supplied. But we really have more to be supplied, viz., the 138 now supplied by licentiates, Presbyterians, etc.; and we have, practically, less than 667 ministers, because of that number many are superannuated, and not a few have permanently abandoned ministerial work.

Of the supplementary list of last year, 86 are reported in the regular list this year. Of the remainder, we have indirect information of 22 more, none of whom are in pastoral work or connected with any ecclesiastical body; and most of them are in other than ministerial employments. We have no authority for inserting their names in our list.

IV. TABLE OF STATISTICAL REPORTS OF THE AMERICAN CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, AS PUBLISHED 1858—1868.

We defer this table until our April number, to be able to insert a corrected "total" of the present issue.

LIST OF CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS IN NORTH AMERICA, WITH THEIR LATEST KNOWN POST-OFFICE ADDRESS.

CONCERNING this list, several things are to be noted:—

1. The names of ministers found in the minutes of the several General Associations and Conferences are its basis; to which we have added only those others which come from reliable authority in the several States. Many names are missing, because not reported by the Associations. See supplementary list.
2. Where a name occurs without a post-office address, the name of a State in parenthesis, following the name, shows what General Association reports him.
3. Licentiates are not ministers. Don't look for their names.
4. This list will sometimes disagree with the foregoing tables, because we have corrected this list up to the latest moment before printing.
5. This list is occasionally inaccurate. Where the same man is reported as living in three States at once, it requires more discernment than we possess to settle the difficulty.
6. In searching for a name of various spellings, look at each form. All contracted names, like "Mc," are arranged according to the contracted spelling.
7. Mails are made up every Tuesday for all the missions of the A. B. C. F. M. Letters and envelopes should be on and of thin paper, addressed simply to the missionary, enclosed in a larger envelope, to "L. S. Ward, Esq., Treasurer, and should be in Boston by Tuesday noon. The rates of postage are,—to Constantinople and Smyrna, Turkey, and Bierút, Syria, 38c. each $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. To the interior of Turkey and to Oroomiah, Persia, 75c. per $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. To Central Turkey, 30c. per $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. To India and Ceylon, 33c. per $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. To China, West and South Africa, 45c. per $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. Sandwich Islands and Micronesia, 3c. per $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. In remitting stamps for the postage do not attach them to the letter.
8. In deciding between Presbyterian and Congregational character, we hold that a member of any ministerial or church body retains his denominational character, although acting as stated supply of a church of the other denomination; but a pastor is necessarily of the same denomination as his church. That is, we have tried to follow this rule, though we are very sure we have not always succeeded. A man can go from one denomination to the other; but no man can be a member of two denominations at once.
9. Send us notice of all mistakes. Especially, supply wanting first names.

THE following list comprises names of ministers supposed to be living, who were reported last year, but not this year. The list has been reduced by striking out all dropped for special causes, and all members of Presbyteries; leaving only such as, not being in pastoral work nor members of any Association, are reported by nobody. Of the similar list last year, 35 are reported in our regular list this year; for the remainder, we wait until membership somewhere brings their names again on paper.

American Congregational Union.

THE vital relation of the work of aiding the new and feeble churches in securing houses of worship to the evangelization of our country and to our prosperity as one branch of the Church of Christ, we trust is coming to be better understood by the churches generally. To establish in all the churches the habit of making yearly contributions for this purpose, to be expended on the basis of a fair and judicious appropriation, and in the light of the knowledge obtained by a wide correspondence with all parts of the field of operation, is now the grand thing to be effected. Till this is done, pastors and churches will have no rest from special appeals, about the relative merits of which they can commonly have only the statements of the interested parties. Every individual application admitted to the churches is an invitation to others to come upon the ground, in the hope to get more than their fair share of what the churches raise, as that would be determined by an impartial Board of Christian men acting with all the facts before them. The Trustees of the Union have done what they can to prevent the evils of these frequent individual appeals, by adopting the rule that the churches making them—except it be in their own immediate neighborhood—shall be debarred from receiving any thing from its treasury. But the pastors have this whole matter in their own hands. If they will place the Union on their list of yearly collections, and steadily exclude particular applications on the ground that they make one regular contribution for church building every year, the Union will have the means of doing all that is most urgent in this exceedingly important department of Christian enterprise.

The Trustees of the Union hope that this may be promptly done. They wait anxiously for a response from the churches to the pleas put in for help this year by so large a number of struggling congregations, whose sanctuaries are in process of erection, or standing half-built without progress, for want of the necessary means.

Appropriations have been paid to the following churches since September 1st:—

Afton, Minnesota,	$ 500.00
Angola, New York, gift and loan,	2,000.00
Annawam, Illinois,	500.00
Pescadero, California,	500.00
Postville, Iowa,	500.00
Boookfield, Missouri, balance,	100.00
Coopersville, Michigan,	400.00
Naples, Maine,	200.00
Rantoul, Illinois,	500.00
Sauk Centre, Minnesota,	500.00
Temple, Maine,	350.00
Clinton, Iowa,	500.00

[January,

Beachwood, Cohasset, Mass.	400.00
Pleasant Hill, Missouri, (loan,)	500.00
Pescadero, California, (balance,)	200.00
Royalton, Wisconsin,	300.00
Lamoille, Illinois,	500.00
Lakeland, Minnesota,	300.00
Dwight, Illinois,	500.00
Saint Catharines, Missouri, (loan,)	500.00
Geneva, Kansas,	300.00
Cameron, Missouri,	500.00
Monroe, Iowa,	400.00
Baraboo, Wisconsin,	500.00
Total,	$ 11,450.00

To meet other appropriations already made and speedily to fall due, as well as to authorize the making of new grants in cases of great interest, very generous contributions are now earnestly solicited. The treasurers of churches where collections have been made will confer a great favor by forwarding the funds in their hands at the earliest convenient day.

American Congregational Association.

VALUABLE additions have been made to the Congregational Library during the last three months. From the library of the late Rev. William Jenks, D. D., of this city, over one hundred volumes, folios, quartos, octavos, etc., some very old, rare, and valuable, have been secured. A few of these it would be difficult to duplicate. We are daily looking for an equal number of volumes from the library of another deceased minister,—who, while living, took a deep interest in our work,—which are all in the line of our specialties; denominational, ecclesiastical, biblical, historical. These two additions will quite exhaust our present shelf room, and hence plead earnestly for the long looked for and longer needed, large, fire-proof, fitting library building. But this necessity is made the more urgent, from the receipt of pamphlets, important, and in large numbers. We gratefully acknowledge the gift and deposit of over six thousand in one parcel, from the A. B. C. F. M., containing reports, sermons, catalogues, minutes, various and valuable serials, being the accumulation of more than fifty years. As relating to missionary life and work throughout the world, they are very instructive. They are largely duplicates of what is still retained at the Missionary House, so that, while it does not impoverish them, it enriches us. Other books and pamphlets come weekly to our table by exchange or by gift, or, in a small way by purchase; and yet, in all these valuable acquisitions, not one dollar has ever been appropriated for this purpose from the treasury. The building fund is kept sacred for its purpose, save necessary working expenses.

The speedy union of the Congregational Board of Publication and the Massachusetts Sabbath School Society, giving the foundation and hope of an efficient and productive denominational publishing organization, is now a reasonable certainty. The efficiency and productiveness of this new organization, however, will not a little depend on its business associations and accommodations. The Boards of government of both are unanimous in the conviction that our contemplated library building, furnishing business rooms for their work on the lower floor and basement, and perhaps in the attic, and rooms for denominational benevolent societies, so as to create a centre of denominational attraction and force, is indispensable to their largest success. And every way, it would be such a convenience, such a focal point of interest and profit, so helpful to every good cause to which our churches contribute, so economical in time and money, so productive of unity and harmony by the social advantages thus secured, that to us it is a wonder of wonders that the favored of our brotherhood, that the churches thus to be helped, do not say to us, "GO FORWARD," "RISE UP AND BUILD," giving us at once and liberally the means to do it with. Our appeal is to such, and most earnestly do we press it. The undersigned will gladly visit any individual or church, will present the subject on the Sabbath, or furnish data to any pastor who will do so; or he will gladly show any person, who will give him the opportunity, what we have so valuable to be cared for already in our rooms. Donations, in larger or smaller sums, can be sent to him, or to J. P. MELLEDGE, Esq., 39 India Wharf, Boston, Mass., if preferred.

Pastors are preparing and preaching historical discourses, memorial discourses, obituary or biographical sermons, sermons on church polity, discipline, and such like; and these are published, a copy of all of which would find a welcome place here.

There are in more or less private libraries some of the writings of the Mathers, — either Richard, Increase, Cotton, or Samuel; also, of John Cotton, of John Eliot, of Thomas Shepard, and other of the Pilgrim and Puritan divines, all of which would help us greatly in our library.

Any election sermon between 1630 and 1730 would be very acceptable, and help us in our set.

Our Library is in especial want of the following papers, periodicals, etc., to complete our sets: —

New York Observer, Vol. i. (1823), Nos. 1 to 26 inclusive; Vol. ii. (1824), No. 7; Vol. iii. (1825), Nos. 2, 3, 29 to 48 inclusive; Vol. vii. (1829), Nos. 9, 32, 33, 43; Vol. xxxvi. (1858), Nos. 1, 9.

ISAAC P. LANGWORTHY,

40 Winter St., BOSTON, MASS., Dec. 18, 1867.

Corresponding Secretary.

[January,

THE undersigned wishes to correct two very strange mistakes in his list of Congregational books lately offered for sale. Punc'hard's three noble volumes should have been $6.75 instead of $5.62, the very lowest wholesale price, and the amount for the twenty-six volumes should have been $27.00 instead of $26.00. As it now is, the twenty-six volumes can be had here for $28.13, and nothing less. And not at these prices, unless at least two thirds of the list is ordered.

ISAAC P. LANGWORTHY.

W A N T E D.

THE undersigned wishes to obtain copies of our several State Minutes, as follows : —
